SHENANDOAH'S GIRDER WAS BROKEN

NO EVIDENCE OF DEFECTIVE WORKMANSHIP AT HEARING

Commander Sidney M. Kraus of the Special Investigation Board Made Statement Before the Naval Court of Inquiry At Lakehurst, N. J., Tuesday--the Ship Collapsed Shortly Before or Simultaneously After A Very Considerable Rotational Oscillation.

Lieutenant Commander C. E. Rosen-dahl, senior surviving officer, objected to these going into the record saying the men had been told that they be used only by the men later in refreshing their recollections. They finally were admitted as memoranda and not as evidence and they were withheld from publication.

JACOB CARLE

Died at Home in Chillicothe of Diabetes--Funeral Services Tuesday.

A failure of one or more girders forward of amidships caused the wrecking of the airship Shenandoah in the opinion of Commander Sidney M. Kraus of the special investigation board, who testified Tuesday before the naval court of inquiry.

Basing his opinion upon a personal observation of the wreck and upon information about the disaster as he could collect, he said this failure occurred simultaneously with or shortly before or shortly after some very considerable rotational oscillation of the ship in the line squall near Ava, Ohio, September 3.

This breakage resulted in the nearly simultaneous failure of the frames holding the control car up under the forward end of the ship, he said, adding that the control car then probably swung by the after control wires, which sheared off a number of frames before it fell, carrying Lieutenant Commander Zachary Lansdowne and other officers and men to death.

Officers who salvaged the forward and after wrecked sections testified that the aluminum alloy of which the girders and beams were made was much more brittle near the sections where the ship broke than in other sections. They said there was no visible evidence that there had been crystallization or any erosion of the metal and they offered no theory as to the cause.

Commander Kraus, who observed the construction of the Los Angeles in Germany for 15 months, said that in his examination of the wreckage he found no evidence of any defective workmanship. He also said he did not believe any of the helium gas cells had burst due to internal pressure, adding that those in the stern and bow, which necessarily were subjected to the greatest pressure, were intact.

Besides hearing Commander Kraus and the salvage officers the court received detailed report from Commander Jacob H. Klein, president of the special investigating board sent to Ohio and heard the stories of three other surviving officers which corroborated in the main the accounts given by the large number of officers and men survivors who passed before the court in quick succession at the opening day Tuesday.

The last of the witnesses immediately available were heard Tuesday and while the court decided to meet again Wednesday its procedure is uncertain. It may examine much of the Shenandoah wreckage which arrived at the air station at Lakehurst, New Jersey Tuesday.

Announcement was made during the day that the scene within the great hull of the Shenandoah would be re-enacted for the court, with the interior of the dirigible Los Angeles as the stage. This may take place tomorrow. The survivors will take position at the stations or places where they were just before the wreck and follow thru the actions they took up to the time the breaking up of the ship and later.

After the last of the narratives of the survivors had been placed into the record there came a tense moment as Commander Klein placed before the court the official records of his investigating boards. These include memoranda made by some of the survivors immediately after the wreck.

Jacob Carle, a former resident of Circleville, died in Chillicothe on Saturday, September 19, at 7:30 o'clock of diabetes, aged 68 years. He was a son of Joseph and Caroline Carle and was born in Alsace Lorraine, France; he came to Circleville with his parents at an early age. He had been a resident of Columbus for many years; he was twice married being survived by his second wife, Mary Entrace Carle and the following children: Margaret, wife of Charles Woodbine; Etta, wife of William Herman; Minnie, wife of Frank Rockey, of Columbus; and Sister Mary Adelaide, of the Dominican order, a teacher in St. Francis' school, Columbus. Of his immediately family he is survived by one brother, Theodore Carle, of Circleville township and one sister, Mrs. Patrick Glacken, of Columbus.

The funeral was held Tuesday morning at 8:30 o'clock from St. Peter's church, Chillicothe, Rev. Father Kuskamp officiating, burial in St. Margaret's cemetery.

Fashion's Path Leads to Printed Flannels

Fashion, having lost its heart and head to printed silks in summer, is faithful to their memory--hence the success of the new printed flannels that succeed them. Here is a dark red frock, printed in black. It has collar and cuffs of fine embroidered batiste and a black silk jabot.

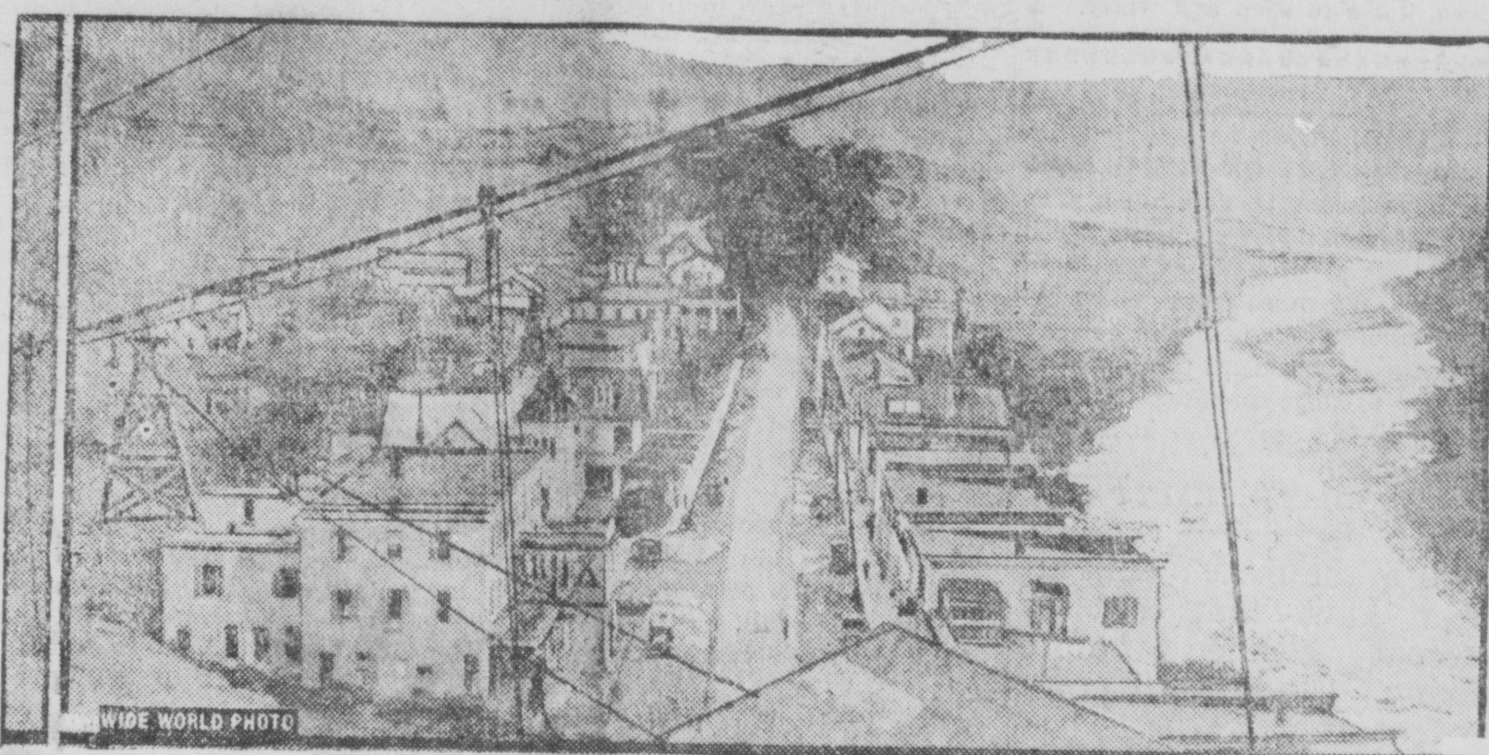

ONE HUNDRED YEARS OLD. Columbus, O., Sept. 22 (UP).--Worry is what makes people grow and you can live to be 100 years old like I am if you can make yourself contented" Mrs. Susan Kennedy of Columbus said Tuesday as she reached the century mark.

Mrs. Kennedy had ten children, never dieted, eats what she pleases, goes to bed at 10 p. m. every night, never voted and is interested in football and baseball.

For breakfast she usually has watermelon and three pieces of bacon. In the evening she likes ice cream.

"I don't feel like 100 years old," she said as he dimming eyes circled children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren gathered for her century anniversary.

Artificial Lake Will Engulf This Village

The little village of Gilboa, N. Y., once a prosperous farming center, soon will be the bottom of an artificial lake 150 feet deep, five miles long, and holding 22,000,000,000 gallons of water for the supply of New York City. The town dates from 1760. The waters of Schoharie creek, blocked by an enormous dam, will be carried from this artificial lake through eighteen miles of tunnel to feed the Ashokan reservoir. This view of Gilboa is from the top of the dam.

LAND OFFICE BUSINESS AT WRECK SCENE

C. W. Niswonger, a farmer near Ava, on whose land the Shenandoah was wrecked, and who made a claim against the U. S. government for $500 damages at Lakehurst investigation Monday, was sorely disappointed when Commander Jacob H. Klein, president of the special board which investigated the wreck, recommended that the claim be disallowed. Niswonger showed Commander Klein his bank book, in which the deposits showed that he had collected $5,000 on admissions to tourists and concessions for soft drinks. This amount was collected in five days.

REAL ESTATE APPRAISALS POSTPONED

The new real estate appraisals will not appear on the Pickaway county tax duplicate for 1925. This has been decided by County Auditor Bryce Briggs, as the state tax commission being officially extended the time for completion of the work to January 1, 1926.

The appraisers have nearly finished their work in the city but the county appraisers have practically just begun and are not in the heart of it as yet.

While the field work will be completed this year, it will take months to go over the immense mass of data, whip it into shape, compile it and then have it gone over by a board of revision.

The appraisers of the utilities industries and county real estate are now hard at work, and it is thought that their report will be ready by the first of the month.

The clerks in the county auditor's office, says Deputy T. D. Krinn, are nearly thru computing one-third of the county for the December tax duplicate.

EXCAVATORS MAKE FINDS IN MOUNDS

Secrets of Ages Revealed as Scientists Delve Deeper Into Treasure.

Excavators of the Great Seip Mound near Bainbridge are rearranging their summer finds and discovering further secrets hidden by the ages which will be deciphered during the winter months and woven into the chain by which American antiquity eventually may be lifted into the realm of history.

Preliminary survey of artifacts brought by Curator H. C. Shetrone to the Ohio Archaeological and Historical Museum at the conclusion of the summer's exploration gives promise of a winter of revelations.

Mr. Shetrone declared that in all probability there will be no startling finds, but that people of his science are contented with small finds, which filled together, add to their knowledge and lead to conclusions about the pre-Columbian inhabitants of America.

Ever since 1846 excavations have been made in Ohio mounds, he said, and gradually the findings have been worked into a tentative history which from time to time is corrected and checked.

At the ceremonial pipes and ornaments found in the Seip mound were being arranged it became evident that the people who had fashioned them were of a culture not as high as those the Hopewell groups.

"Several of the finds have been unique and unprecedented," Mr. Shetrone said, "but the fineness of their art is not quite up to the Hopewells." "The pipe bowls and bird carvings on the tortoise shell ornaments indicate a migration of people from the south, for their types coincide with the remains of the race found south of Tennessee and not those of the Hopewell mounds, which show the highest culture," said Mr. Shetrone.

As an example of the new discoveries of the last few days Mr. Shetrone cited the finding Tuesday of a faint imprint upon a copper plate, which is being scrutinized closely. The plate was one of those found beneath the skulls of the four princes in the "burial of the pearls." The imprint represents loops, scrolls, circles and curves, believed by the archaeologists to be the impression of a regal shawl worn by one of the princes as a part of his burial robe. H. R. Goodwin of the Archaeological society, will endeavor to reconstruct the design.

All of the ceremonial pipes are carved from stone and weigh from six to nine pounds. The bowl of one is 15 inches long.

All of the carvings represent animals. One of them depicts a dog devouring a human head. The animal is holding the inverted skull between its forepaws. In the open mouth of another dog are carefully carved teeth, showing that the mound builders studied the physical features and believed in representing them accurately in their sculpture work. The front teeth are the short incisors. Next are the long tusk-like canines. Behind them are the molars and double molars in proper order and number.

The image of a bear is carved on the longest of the pipes, which measures 15 inches from snout to tail. Another bowl represents an owl, with unmistakable features revealed in its beak, large eyes and feathers. The owl pipe-head had been painted red, and still a reddish cast. The widest of the ceremonial pipes is that of the spread-eagle, which measured ten inches between wing tips.

"As the ancient Americans smoked these pipes, the bowls were rested on the ground," said Mr. Shetrone, in explaining their utility, in spite of their weight. "They were used in ceremonies. For their ready use the mound builders carried lighter pipes with them."

COMFORT BAGS

For the Needy Survivors of the World War.

Comfort bags for soldiers confined in the various government hospitals, were made by the members of the auxiliary of the American Legion at a called meeting last evening at the home of Mrs. E. E. Prose. Nine bags were made and filled with various articles selected from a list furnished by the authorities. Handkerchiefs, washcloths, soap, knives, scissors, needlebooks, thread, memo-books, cards of buttons and stationery, which were all donated by the members, filled the bags.

Mrs. Prose as hostess, proved very solicitous and the evening was thoroughly enjoyed by all members present, as well as being a very profitable one. The next regular meeting, which will be held next Monday evening, will be at the home of Mrs. Charles Smith in East Mound street, as the improvements in the Post Room at the hall are not complete.

Woman's Stern Eye Tames Wild Man

San Antonio, Tex.—"Como," the wild man, captured in the depths of Africa, is a wild man no longer. Some time ago he was chained to a post in one of the carnival tents at the Fiesta de San Jacinto in this city. Perspiration streamed down his almost nude brown body and he shook his mane in beastly defiance at the crowds.

Mrs. Keeton had been taking in the carnival when she was attracted by groans from the "wild man's" tent.

She went in to see and was warned not to get too close to "Como." And then "Como" turned a pair of blue eyes at her and exclaimed: "Why, mamma, what are you doing here?" Mrs. Keeton took her son, James, sixteen, home to soap and water.

WORDS OF WISDOM IN MOTHER'S WILL

Short Document Worthy of Place in Literature.

Worth more than all her personal belongings was the compact of love, piety, faith and common sense which a New York woman left her family. Like all the great things of life, the message is simple, and valuable enough as an item of interest to the public at large to find space in the newspapers. The letter was written by Mrs. Lydia Harding Hammond, widow of the Rev. John Dennis Hammond, a Methodist minister, to be read by the children after her death. It runs as follows:

"Dear Children—I've just made my will, and this is to tell you what I want done with my personal belongings. Don't keep anything just because it was mine; they are just things, and worn and shabby at that; love doesn't need such things for remembrance.

"Most of my books are old and many of them I haven't looked into for years. I have loved and kept them because they have enlarged my life. Henry is to have them and my Bible, typewriter and Verdun vase.

"I won't be separated from any of you, dear children. I'll just be closer to God and will understand better the ways in which prayers and faith can open ways through which God can help you and I'll be able at least to love you with all my heart and without anything in that love that will make you feel as if I wanted to control you or bother you.

"Bury my body as cheaply as you can and forget it. Don't wear mourning, unless, of course, 'Lynx' wants to. And think of me as alive, alive beyond your farthest thought, and near, and loving you, and well at last, far as the winds of heaven and learning more and more the things I want to know and growing more toward what God wants me to become.

"I think, maybe, John will have our home ready when I come and we'll have a real home at last.

"Love one another. Hold fast to that whether you understand one another or not, and remember nothing really matters except being kind to one another and to all the world as far as you can reach.

"Your Lovingest Mother."

Such faith as this Methodist minister's wife displays, says the Boston Globe, "is the best evidence of those things this woman believed. She lived them and her faith revealed through her will shines like a star. Here in very truth is the victory that overcometh the world, the life eternal, lived now in the midst of time." Says the New York Sun:

"We prefer to accept this letter as more nearly revealing the spirit which today generally animates and inspires American family life than to join those who see in occasional records of domestic discord, parental inattention and filial neglect true indexes of the national character. The beauty of faith, and of hope, and of unselfish devotion its simple phrases record are found in countless households from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Lakes to the Gulf. The power to set forth the sentiments of loyalty and virtues as Mrs. Hammond set them forth is possessed by few, and this gives to her letter a unique and universal value."—Literary Digest.

Slip of Girl Awarded Grand Prix de Rome

Paris.—French women are exulting over the latest feminine triumph.

Twenty-two of thirty-two graybeards have awarded the coveted Grand Prix de Rome—the highest art recompense in France—to a slip of a girl not yet twenty-one years old, Mlle. Odette Pauvert.

Although not the first woman to win the honor of a sojourn at Villa Medici—one sculptress and two musicians preceded her—she is the first woman painter considered worthy to represent French talent in the Eternal city. The painting which won her the prize is entitled "The Legend of St. Roman."

The girl is in art a mystic. She has already painted several religious pictures, one of which won a medal at the last Paris salon.

Outside of her art Odette Pauvert is a typical modern French girl. She swims almost as well as she paints, and is as much at home in a dance hall as in a studio.

Official Language Irks Woman Weather Clerk

Buxton, England.—The only woman weather clerk in England, Miss E. W. Pilkington, has grown tired of the official language of daily weather bulletins issued from headquarters, and has instituted a new departure, which, while pleasing the populace of the district, does not exactly meet with official approval.

Miss Pilkington favors an up-to-date style in forecasting the weather, one of her latest reading:

"Temperature: There is an acute shortage of therms in the district. Winds: Still of an oriental character. Pressure: A steady, reliable worker. Local trend: Overflows with happiness. Inference: We are qualifying for the final of the weather championship."

Another was worded: "Temperature: Every day in every way it grows warmer and warmer. Inference: All the weather factors are decked out in their finest garb. The specter at the feast is too shadowy to worry us."

Hailstorms Come by Day

It is a curious fact, but scientists seem agreed that four out of five hailstorms occur in the day time and those during the day are usually the most intense and damaging. This fact is quite true irrespective of the sections of the country in which such storms are studied.

Hints Worth While to Amateur Dressmakers

Amateur dressmakers often find a difficulty in getting the necks of frocks quite right, especially when using soft material of the kind that stretches. It is easy to make a mistake in cutting out the neck, and to find when trying on the frock that the material has given, so that the neck is much too low. It is an easy mistake to make, but not so easy to remedy, for these straight kimono frocks can be completely spoiled by a wrong neck line.

A good plan is to decide on the shape of opening required, then, measuring carefully, run a strong tacking thread round the line where you are going to cut, and then cut above it. If you are sure of your neck line you can even sew the binding along one side of the material before cutting out, then cut, and finish binding quickly before the material can slip at all.

For a pattern that needs to be fitted on the wearer, it is a good rule to cut as little as possible, just allowing enough space for the head to get through before fitting; then cut further as required, and finish as quickly as possible.

Milady's New Belts Are Narrow and Decorative

The new belts are narrow, confining themselves to the widths between one and two inches. However, the fact that there is little of them in no way interferes with the trend toward ornamentation, and these narrow strips are replete with trimming. They may have a bead or clip edge, or if the center is to be trimmed they sometimes have pinked edges with a bit of cut work.

Hand painting is noted on many of the fall belts. Some of these have matching pocket ornaments, and collars and cuffs. These, as a rule, are suede, each object bearing a cluster of brilliant flowers.

A belt of two colors has edges and tabs of tan leather, while the body of the belt is red kid. The tan tabs end in arrow points, which slip through eyelets of the kid. The buckle on this 1 1/4-inch belt is metal.

The ring type fastening with snaps is favored. There also are metal and covered buckles shown. Nail-head and silver-spot effects adorn many of the suede models, and one belt with pinked edge has gilt all around.

Overlays of color frequently trim the models of gold and silver, as well as comprising the body of belts where the gilded leather is used as ornamentation.

Frocks Disappointing, Paris Writer Asserts

So far evening frocks on display or even in prospect at most of the salons are disappointing, says a Paris fashion correspondent in the New York Times. Some are frankly ugly. There is a striving for the bizarre. Most people will be sorry to hear that we are threatened with a return to the excessively low U-shaped back, which displays all the ugliest features of that part of the anatomy. A mode that even few beautiful women can wear with the best effect.

High in front, the new evening dresses show a tendency to narrowness across the chest, and are still sleeveless. They are mostly severely plain at the top, all the trimming being on the bottom of the skirt, where at dinners, at the theater, and even at table in a dancing club, it cannot be seen at all. Many of them are a frank return to the shaded-rainbow idea, and these are all pale at the top and darker at the bottom. Even their creators admit that they will have to offer some alternative to them later.

FROM A MAN WHO KNOWS

In discussing the subject of State Versus Federal Regulation in the Transformation of the Power Industry to Central Generation and Interconnection of Systems, Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, in a recent address said:

"I do not agree with the conclusion that federal regulation is necessary.

"I can see no reason for the imposition of a superior regulation, merely because Congress may have the power to exercise its authority under the commerce clause.

"The essence of regulation lies in a tight grip on the concern that actually deals with the consumer.

"Power is, by necessity" bound to be local in its districts—as to its service, its generation and distribution.

"Nothing will produce worse service than to attempt to transfer local problems to absentee solution at Washington.

"Nothing could be a more hideous extension of centralization in the federal government than to undermine state utility commissions and state responsibilities.

"No one can survey the work of the state commissions and the instructive series of court decisions concerning their rulings as a whole, without realizing that we are gradually developing a science of regulation and of understanding on one hand of the means of drawing the fine line between minimum rates to the people and on the other hand of such a reasonable profit to the industry as will stimulate its advancement.

"It is my belief that the public service commissions with very little just criticism are proving themselves fully adequate to control the situation."

Earth's Population

Ernest George Ravenstein, geographer and statistician, estimated the population of the earth at 1,487,900,000 in 1890, and his figures stood unchanged for some years. Another computation made in the early '90s put the total at 1,440,650,000. Estimates of the world's population today range from 1,750,000,000 to 1,850,000,000.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

PLAN SANITARIUM ON MOUNT POPOCATEPETL

Will Be Erected at Altitude of 17,843 Feet.

Mexico City.—At an altitude of 17,843 feet, near the snow-covered peak of the volcano Mount Popocatepetl, practical use is to be made of the romantic lure of the "mountain that smokes," as Popocatepetl is referred to frequently.

The ministry of public works makes the announcement that an offer has been received from British capitalists for the construction of a sanatorium above the snow line of the mountain to be used by tubercular patients.

The plan includes the building of an extraordinarily complicated aerial railway for the ascent of the mountain. Part of this line is to be an ordinary funicular or cog incline railway. This is to reach as high as the grades up the mountain's side will permit. From there on an aerial line, cars to be run on a cable, much like elevators dropped into mine shafts, will make the further ascent possible.

The investment is to reach $500,000. The Popocatepetl crater will not interfere with the plans, it is said, as it is proposed to build the road and terminal on the side of the volcano facing Mexico City, while the sulphuric eruptions and smoke clouds that the mountain emits continually make their exit from its internal calderon from an opening on the east side of the mountain facing the city of Puebla, although the smoke spread above the peak is visible from Mexico City.

"Corn-Made" Tires From Kansas Seen if Prices Soar

Los Angeles, Cal.—Dr. James F. Norris, president of the American Chemical society in session here, sees in the cornfields of Kansas a possible solution of the disturbing situation recently created by skyrocketing rubber prices.

If continued high prices force tire manufacturers to appeal to the chemist, Doctor Norris said, it is entirely possible that a method of manufacturing synthetic rubber from corn and wheat derivatives may be developed and the rubber plantation supplanted in some measure at least by the middle western American farm. "It is among the possibilities that our research men will develop a valuable commercial rubber from acetone, from which the Germans made rubber during the war," he said.

"Acetone is a by-product of butyl alcohol, and butyl alcohol is produced from grain. In other words our automobile tires may yet be made from Kansas corn."

Doctor Norris pointed out that crude petroleum may be used as the base of synthetic rubber, in which case the corn and wheat growers of the Middle West will have to compete with the oil companies.

Finds Giant Redwood Tree, Sells Lumber for $5,250

Portland, Ore.—Finding a California redwood log is hardly less lucky than finding a gold mine. George Walker of Cannon Beach, Ore., has proved this to his own satisfaction. Walker recently dug up a redwood log which was partially buried by the sand of Cannon Beach. He worked two days with a team and scraper and then he began sawing it in lumber lengths. He estimates that he has taken $3,000 worth of lumber out of the log and has cut 30 circular dining-room table tops worth $75 each. A remarkable fact is that the log has lain in the same place for many years and no one realized its value. The log was eight feet through and 50 feet long. The rings showed that it was five hundred twenty-seven years old.

Naval Commander Almost Blinded in Lone Cruise

Clallam Bay, Wash.—Commander Eustace B. Maude, R. N., retired, who departed from Mayne island, 30 miles north of Victoria, B. C., April 30 on a lone voyage to England in a 25-foot ketch, the Halfmoon, landed at La Push, an Indian village, 35 miles south of Cape Flattery, partly blind.

He was reported as far south as Santa Barbara, Cal., July 7 and was sighted from Destruction island off the Washington coast, headed north, flying distress signals.

Commander Maude said that the constant glare of the sun's rays on the water blinded him so that he was unable to make observations or read his compass, which forced him to return home.

Forest Fires Cost $38,000,000 in 1924

Washington. — There were nearly 92,000 forest fires in 1924, which swept 29,000,000 acres of public and private lands and did $38,000,000 damage exclusive of injury to young growth, watershed protection, wild life and recreation facilities.

The figures, gathered by forestry officials, are said to be accurate and to indicate how criminal is the carelessness of those responsible for much of the loss.

Many of the worst fires, it was reported, occurred in several of the southern states and in California.

CHILLICOTHE REFORMATORY NOW ASSURED

Washington, Sept. 22 (UP).—Erection of a department of justice reformatory at Chillicothe, Ohio, was practically assured today when the Veterans Bureau turned back 1,800 acres of Camp Sherman land to the war department for re-allocation.

Officials said the land would be given to the justice department for a penal institution. The Veterans Bureau retained 3,000 acres and improvements in the federal hospital there are expected to be made.

Architects are now drawing plans for the new hospital buildings to replace temporary structures now at Chillicothe.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

Mrs. Henry P. Folsom will give a luncheon to Columbus and Chillicothe friends Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hedges, at their pretty country home north of Tarlton, delightfully entertained Sunday to a dinner party. Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ochs, Mr. and Mrs. Meinhard Palm, of Amanda; Mr. and Mrs. Arch Fox and daughter, Miss Golda, of Laurelville, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Pfeiffer and sons Alvin and Frank, and daughter, Ruth Marie, of Columbus.

The M. E. Sunday school class of Carroll, Ohio, known as the Merry Hustlers, with their husbands and children and well filled baskets met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Imler Sunday, September 20. A long table that groaned under the weight of the many good things to eat with chicken galore, including ice cream and cake, was spread on the lawn. The day was ideal. There were 72 present: Professor A. F. Cameron and children, of Circleville; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kisler, Mr. and Mrs. John Kisler and children, Mr. and Mrs. George Kester, Mrs. Effie McFarland and son, Miss Mayme Kester, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Calvert and son, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Crow, Mr. and Mrs. Harley Crow and son, Mr. and Mrs. Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Crut, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Saylor, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Parish and son, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cooper and children, Mr. and Mrs. Frank McCleary and children, Mr. and Mrs. Russell McCleary and children, Miss Nell McCleary, Mr. and Mrs. Will Brandt, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Fisher and son, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pippis and children, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Schmit and children, Mrs. Charles Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Blackstone and children, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Imler and children. Mrs. Imler was a former member of the class. All enjoyed a very good time.

A very delightful day was spent in and around Portsmouth by a party of thirty persons.

After motoring thru a very beautiful country by way of the Scioto Trail, the great structure of the C. & O. railroad bridge across the beautiful Ohio was visited, and in the shade of this structure a bountiful basket dinner was enjoyed.

After dinner the ferry crossing the river into New Portsmouth, Kentucky, was visited.

Those who enjoyed the trip were: Mr. and Mrs. John Burdett and children, of Chillicothe; Mr. and Mrs. Delbert de Bord, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Henkel, Mrs. Charley Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Elden Tewksbury and son, Everett, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Massie, Mr. and Mrs. Adam Henkel, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Tewksbury, Misses Viola Henkel and Ada de Bord, Messrs. Charles, William, Elmer and Edgar, Wilbert and Melvin de Bord and Gilbert Tewksbury, of Waverly and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Karshner and daughter, Mary, of Circleville.

Mrs. Karshner, in boosting the Circleville Pumpkin Show, displayed a nice, yellow cardboard pumpkin on the rear of the auto, and while feasting on the contents of the baskets, a Portsmouth cow which was pasturing near by, tested the quality of the Pickaway pumpkins. After eating about half of the fine pumpkin decided that she did not care for the Pickaway county product.

Mrs. Karshner returned home without the pumpkin, hoping after the big show to be able to ship a load of real pumpkins to Portsmouth for the benefit of the cows of that vicinity.

Everybody reported a good time and decided to go again.

Interesting Reading

An old man, a real patriarch of the hills, wandered into the public library of a southern Indiana town, recently, and stood for a few minutes looking around. Finally approaching the librarian he said, rather defensively, "I reckon ye don't object to my readin' in that book there, do ye?" pointing with his cane in the direction of the dictionary.

Being assured that he was free to use the book, he seated himself comfortably, and seemingly, with much interest, perused the pages of the book for some time.—Indianapolis News.

Leaves $50 to Burglars, Gets Note of Thanks

New York.—Arthur Bohm, who lives from mid-April to mid-October at Grand View, N. Y., near Nyack, where his daughter has a real estate business, has on his return to his Brooklyn home every fall for seven years left a $50 bill on the middle of the living-room table with this note:

"I have taken all the valuables from this house. Only the furniture remains. Please accept this bank note for your trouble in breaking in. Please depart without doing any damage. Thank you. ARTHUR BOHM."

Mr. Bohm started the practice after a number of his neighbors' homes at Grand View had been pretty well wrecked by thieves looking for plunder during the winter months.

Every spring until now he has gone back to Grand View to find his note with the $50 attached still on the table. But when he arrived in Grand View from Brooklyn with his wife and daughter the $50 was gone.

Across the face of the note was scrawled in lead pencil the word, "Thanks."

MISTAKE NOT TO "KEEP" BIRTHDAYS

Bond of Affection in Re- membering Anniversary.

"Do you still keep your birthday?" asked a woman of me the other day.

"Of course I do," I replied.

"I stopped that years ago," she told me. She could not have been thirty!

When she had gone I began to wonder at what age a woman should cease to celebrate her birthday. The more I pondered it over, writes Mrs. Nestor Noel in the New York Times, the more I came to the conclusion that she should keep it as long as she lives.

There are several reasons for this. If she be the mother of a family the fact of her birthday being a day of celebration teaches unselfishness to the children. For weeks beforehand they can plan for mother's birthday, working at home-made gifts in secret, asking themselves what she would like and being ready to give up little pleasures for her sake.

There are lonely women who have no children. Wouldn't it be a great thing if some one in the village or street where they lived found out their birthdays and arranged with other people to give them joyous surprise? Flowers can be given to the women who are well to do. Cakes and other practical things quickly suggest themselves when the woman is less well off.

Men do not care for these things so much. They forget their birthdays. We know they often forget their wedding anniversaries.

This is a fact: Men do forget these things. Women, however, are different. I think that even the modern woman clings more to the old traditions than a man, and even if she says nothing, yet in her heart there is an ache somewhere when her birthday has been forgotten.

I remember once going to see an old friend of mine. Business kept me from getting to her house until six o'clock. She had a husband and nine children. When I came so late and presented my gift with my birthday wishes her eyes filled with tears as she looked at me gratefully.

"You are the only person who remembered my birthday," she said.

The gift I had taken her was of no importance. I have forgotten what it was. She was quick to see and appreciate the thought behind the gift. She asked me to stay for tea. As she hastened to get it ready three of her children whispered together and then ran across to a store. Later they came back with a present from each.

"You see," I remarked, "your children have not forgotten you."

"They would never have thought of my birthday," she whispered. "If it hadn't been for you."

Then her mother-love made her make much of their gifts, but I wished that they had not needed to be reminded of their mother's birthday by a friend who, however dear, did not belong to the family.

We want our nearest and dearest to remember us first. Even grandmothers should celebrate their birthdays. It is so good for the rest of the family. It knits them together with a common bond of love.

I mean to keep my birthday as long as I live. Even if I should have seventy grandchildren and they should each present me with a pair of slippers. I would be thankful. Not that I should need all those slippers, but I would certainly need all the love that prompted the gifts.

Women always need love; they cannot live without it. Let them not be quick to say: "I never keep my birthday." When they allow people to forget their birthdays they lose the manifestation of a great deal of love.

Bad Bargain for Railroad

A young man's courtship is costing the Ludlow (Vt.) railroad $25.48 a week, according to engineers' estimates. It's like this: A youthful swain in Proctorsville is courting a young woman in Ludlow. He signals the express at Proctorsville to take him to Ludlow, paying a round trip fare of 36 cents. Returning to Proctorsville he signals another express train. The cost of stopping the two trains and starting them again costs about $4 each night, according to the engineers, so that though the railroad receives $2.52 a week from the young man in fares, it pays out $28 a week for stopping its express trains.

Parachutes Annoy Town

It is illegal to fall out of an airplane or balloon in Oakland, Cal., without a permit, even if the fall is made in a parachute. City commissioners recently passed an ordinance to that effect and one also requiring owners of balloons and planes that carry passengers to post a $20,000 bond to protect, not the passengers, but the lives and property of those who remain on the ground.

The ordinance was made necessary, according to city officials, because five parachute jumpers fell heavily recently, all on one day. One crashed on a roof and the other four landed in expensive flower beds and shrubbery.

Bible Distribution

Eighteen thousand copies of the Bible have been distributed in the orphanages of the Near East relief during the past two years, according to a report from the overseas directors of that organization. The Bibles, printed in eight languages, were secured through the co-operation of the American and British Bible societies, the Greek and Armenian churches, and various co-operating religious bodies.

One Detail Was Missing

On the historic afternoon when Jack Johnson fought Jim Jeffries in Nevada for the world's championship there was a baseball game at the old Polo grounds. In the press stand, among others, sat Sid Mercer, the sporting writer, and Franklin P. Adams, the column conductor. For some reason or other, ringside bulletins were not being received at the ball park. Naturally, the crowd wanted to know how the fight was going.

Several hundred spectators, drawn by the fact that telegraph instruments were clicking in the press stand, packed themselves solidly behind the wire netting in the hope of hearing tidings from Reno over the wire. Mercer and Adams got a joint inspiration. They pretended to be taking a ringside description of one of the instruments. First one would chant off a purely imaginary account of a round, and then the other would.

Now it so happened that Adams had a bet down on the negro to win, and accordingly favored the black contender. In his turn to "read" a round, he would depict Johnson as hammering Jeffries into a pulp. But Mercer, who was a partisan of Jeffries, would each time retell with a spirited but, of course, purely fictitious account of how the white man, having rallied heroically, was now dealing mighty blows upon the head and body of the tottering, weakening black.

Naturally, the listening crowd was torn by conflicting emotions. Cheers and groans marked the utterances of the two gifted romancers. Eventually, when the multitude had grown so in numbers that the pressure of its bulk threatened to break down the netting, the conspirators decided it was time to bring their joke to a climax.

Mercer, cocking his head above an instrument as though the better to hear, began reciting, somewhat after this fashion:

"Round seven! At-the-sound-of-the-bell-the-two-men-leap-to-the-center-of-the-ring! They-exchange-a-whirlwind-of-jabs-and-upper-cuts! The-fighting-is-the-fiercest-ever-seen-in-a-heavy-weight-contest! Suddenly-the-knock-out-blow-is-delivered-upon-the-point-of-the-jaw! The-defeated-man-drops-like-a-log! His-seconds-drag-his-unconscious-form-into-his-corner! The-maddened-throng-acclaims-the-winner-and-pandemonium-reigns-supreme!"

Here he paused and, with the air of one who has completed a hard job, made as though to sit down.

From a thousand throats behind him one question arose in a mighty chorus:

"Who wins?"

Dramatically Mercer raised his hand for silence, and a deep hush befell.

"The dispatches did not state," he said, simply, and sat down again.

Combating the Yellow Peril

Every time the government takes a census this story is revived, which means it enjoys a rejuvenated popularity at intervals of exactly ten years. When I catch myself laughing at it, I know that another decade has slipped by me unawares.

The story has to do with the enumerator who called at a humble home in the outskirts of Cincinnati, and there found the head of the family humped up over a large volume. It developed, in the course of the conversation, that the householder some months before had been induced by a traveling agent to invest in an encyclopedia, and that to get the worth of his money he had been reading the books of the set pretty constantly ever since. He was now full of facts, statistics and data.

In reply to the caller's questions he gave his name and age and his wife's name and age.

"How many infant children have you?" asked the census taker.

"I've got three," said the citizen.

"And that's all there ever will be, too, you take it from me."

"What makes you so positive about that?" asked the visitor.

"I'll tell you why there won't never be but three," said the man. "It's wrote down in this here book that every fourth child born in the world is Chinese."

A Shakespearean actor was left stranded in a small town in Michigan. This was in the days when there still were Shakespearean actors.

He obtained board at the local hotel until a remittance arrived to take him back to Chicago. As he had no funds for tipping purposes he got scant attention from the servants.

One day he pushed and pushed the push button in his room without getting an answer. Then he got out of bed, put on his trousers and overcoat, turned the coat collar up about his bare throat and ventured through the hallway until he came to the rounds opening down upon the office floor.

"Bellboy! Bellboy!" he called in his best speaking voice.

"Watcher want?" answered back a youthful mental impertinently.

"Bellboy," said the Thespian with much dignity, "I desire my laundry to be brought to me forthwith."

"G'wan!" said the boy. "You didn't have but half a shirt when you hit this town."

"That," said the actor, "is the laundry to which I refer."

TRADE SACRED RELICS FOR TICKET TO MOVIES

Children of Guam Are Keen for Wild West Dramas and Bathing Girl Pictures.

Honolulu.—An ancient sacred relic in exchange for a ticket to the movies is the latest tale to float up from the mysterious islands of the South seas, where a group of scientists is attempting to solve the problem of the origin of the Polynesian race.

It is told in a letter from one of the workers attached to the Bishop museum, Honolulu, and concerns Guam and the Chamorro children on the sun-baked shores of that island who will hunt assiduously for bits of weathered stone in order to enjoy viewing the cowboys, train wrecks, shooting scrapes and bathing girls that appear on the Guam screen as representing that far-away and unknown country, America.

The search is "hazardous" for the children because of the tradition that the strangely shaped stones which are in such great demand at the Agana "movie-house" belonged once to the "Taotao-Mona," or the "people of before time," who are feared so greatly that none of the adult residents dare touch the relics.

The stones are the implements and weapons left by the former inhabitants of the Marianas, who may have belonged to a race antedating the Polynesians, the scientists say.

Many varieties of the objects are necessary for the study of the habits and customs of the race, and the Bishop museum expedition has contracted with the Agana motion-picture theater in one of the strangest compacts ever signed.

Its terms provide for an exchange of the relics for free admission to the show, the museum to redeem the stones, most of which have come from "tabu" or forbidden spots. They will be studied carefully and perhaps in them will be found the clue that will lead to the origin of the Polynesian peoples.

Setting Eggs 50-50 on

Sex, Experiments Prove

Washington.—The Department of Agriculture, under the direction of Secretary Jardine, has announced you cannot bet on the sex of a chicken within by the length, shape or weight of an egg.

Scientists, however, it was explained, are able to tell the sex of the chicken in the shell after seven or eight days of incubation.

The investigation just concluded by Dr. M. A. Jull, poultry husbandman, has proved beyond a doubt that there is nothing in the contention that the long, slim, heavy eggs produce roosters and the small and shorter ones pullets.

"It has been determined, however," says Doctor Jull, "that the greater the number of eggs a hen lays before being put into the breeding pen, the larger will be the proportion of females and the smaller the proportion of males."

SURELY "THE FRESHMAN" IS HAROLD LLOYD'S BEST.

Look at it any way you wish, you'll have to admit after you have seen Harold Lloyd's newest comedy, "The Freshman," now showing at the Metropolitan Theatre, that this world-renowned star has hit the top of the comedy field. Ever since "The Freshman" opened here, the audiences have been kept in a continual uproar. If this is not the funniest picture Lloyd has ever made, then this reviewer's funny bone is not working.

"The Freshman" tells the story of a young chap who goes to college and seeks recognition as the most popular boy in school. His code of life is of such a generous nature that he becomes the subject of ridicule among his fellow students. Just when everything seems to turn against him, he gets an opportunity to play in the season's most important foot ball game. What develops thereafter might better be told on the screen, as the hilarious scenes, thrills and suspense are almost indescribable. If you want to see Harold Lloyd at his best and in a role decidedly different from any previous picture, don't miss "The Freshman."

JUST TWO MORE DAYS!

—Today and tomorrow, then goodbye! All records for rattendance smashed! Smothered! Buried under an avalanche of happy crowds, who have stormed the theatre and acclaimed "The Freshman" the greatest entertainment ever produced!

PLAN SANITARIUM ON MOUNT POPOCATEPETL

Will Be Erected at Altitude of 17,843 Feet.

Mexico City.—At an altitude of 17,843 feet, near the snow-covered peak of the volcano Mount Popocatepetl, practical use is to be made of the romantic lure of the "mountain that smokes," as Popocatepetl is referred to frequently.

The ministry of public works makes the announcement that an offer has been received from British capitalists for the construction of a sanatorium above the snow line of the mountain to be used by tubercular patients.

The plan includes the building of an extraordinarily complicated aerial railway for the ascent of the mountain. Part of this line is to be an ordinary funicular or cog incline railway. This is to reach as high as the grades up the mountain's side will permit. From there on an aerial line, cars to be run on a cable, much like elevators dropped into mine shafts, will make the further ascent possible.

The investment is to reach $500,000. The Popocatepetl crater will not interfere with the plans, it is said, as it is proposed to build the road and terminal on the side of the volcano facing Mexico City, while the sulphuric eruptions and smoke clouds that the mountain emits continually make their exit from its internal caldron from an opening on the east side of the mountain facing the city of Puebla, although the smoke spread above the peak is visible from Mexico City.

"Corn-Made" Tires From Kansas Seen if Prices Soar

Los Angeles, Cal.—Dr. James F. Norris, president of the American Chemical society in session here, sees in the cornfields of Kansas a possible solution of the disturbing situation recently created by skyrocketing rubber prices.

If continued high prices force tire manufacturers to appeal to the chemist, Doctor Norris said, it is entirely possible that a method of manufacturing synthetic rubber from corn and wheat derivatives may be developed and the rubber plantation supplanted in some measure at least by the middle western American farm. "It is among the possibilities that our research men will develop a valuable commercial rubber from acetone, from which the Germans made rubber during the war," he said.

"Acetone is a by-product of butyl alcohol, and butyl alcohol is produced from grain. In other words our automobile tires may yet be made from Kansas corn."

Doctor Norris pointed out that crude petroleum may be used as the base of synthetic rubber, in which case the corn and wheat growers of the Middle West will have to compete with the oil companies.

Finds Giant Redwood Tree, Sells Lumber for $5,250

Portland, Ore.—Finding a California redwood log is hardly less lucky than finding a gold mine. George Walker of Cannon Beach, Ore., has proved this to his own satisfaction. Walker recently dug up a redwood log which was partially buried by the sand of Cannon Beach. He worked two days with a team and scraper and then he began sawing it in lumber lengths. He estimates that he has taken $3,000 worth of lumber out of the log and has cut 30 circular dining-room table tops worth $75 each. A remarkable fact is that the log has lain in the same place for many years and no one realized its value. The log was eight feet through and 50 feet long. The rings showed that it was five hundred twenty-seven years old.

Naval Commander Almost Blinded in Lone Cruise

Clallam Bay, Wash.—Commander Eustace B. Maude, R. N., retired, who departed from Mayne island, 30 miles north of Victoria, B. C., April 30 on a lone voyage to England in a 25-foot ketch, the Halfmoon, landed at La Push, an Indian village, 35 miles south of Cape Flattery, partly blind. He was reported as far south as Santa Barbara, Cal., July 7 and was sighted from Destruction island off the Washington coast, headed north, flying distress signals.

Commander Maude said that the constant glare of the sun's rays on the water blinded him so that he was unable to make observations or read his compass, which forced him to return home.

Forest Fires Cost $38,000,000 in 1924

Washington. — There were nearly 92,000 forest fires in 1924, which swept 29,000,000 acres of public and private lands and did $38,000,000 damage exclusive of injury to young growth, watershed protection, wild life and recreation facilities.

The figures, gathered by forestry officials, are said to be accurate and to indicate how criminal is the carelessness of those responsible for much of the loss.

Many of the worst fires, it was reported, occurred in several of the southern states and in California.

CHILlicothe REFORMATORY NOW ASSURED

Washington, Sept. 22 (UP).—Erection of a department of justice reformatory at Chillicothe, Ohio, was practically assured today when the Veterans Bureau turned back 1,800 acres of Camp Sherman land to the war department for re-allocation.

Officials said the land would be given to the justice department for a penal institution. The Veterans Bureau retained 3,000 acres and improvements in the federal hospital there are expected to be made.

Architects are now drawing plans for the new hospital buildings to replace temporary structures now at Chillicothe.

The M. E. Sunday school class of Carroll, Ohio, known as the Merry Hustlers, with their husbands and children and well filled baskets met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Imler Sunday, September 20. A very delightful day was spent in and around Portsmouth by a party of thirty persons.

After motoring thru a very beautiful country by way of the Scioto Trail, the great structure of the C. & O. railroad bridge across the beautiful Ohio was visited, and in the shade of this structure a bountiful basket dinner was enjoyed.

After dinner the ferry crossing the river into New Portsmouth, Kentucky, was visited.

Those who enjoyed the trip were: Mr. and Mrs. John Burdett and children, of Chillicothe; Mr. and Mrs. Delbert de Bord, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Henkel, Mrs. Charley Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Elden Tewksbury and son, Everett, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Massie, Mr. and Mrs. Adam Henkel, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Tewksbury, Misses Viola Henkel and Ada de Bord, Messrs. Charles, William, Elmer and Edgar, Wilbert and Melvin de Bord and Gilbert Tewksbury, of Waverly and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Karshner and daughter, Mary, of Circleville.

Mrs. Karshner, in boosting the Circleville Pumpkin Show, displayed a nice, yellow cardboard pumpkin on the rear of the auto, and while feasting on the contents of the baskets, a Portsmouth cow which was pasturing near by, tested the quality of the Pickaway pumpkins. After eating about half of the fine pumpkin decided that she did not care for the Pickaway county product. Mrs. Karshner returned home without the pumpkin, hoping after the big show to be able to ship a load of real pumpkins to Portsmouth for the benefit of the cows of that vicinity.

Everybody reported a good time and decided to go again.

Interesting Reading

An old man, a real patriarch of the hills, wandered into the public library of a southern Indiana town, recently, and stood for a few minutes looking around. Finally approaching the librarian he said, rather defensively, "I reckon ye don't object to my readin' in that book there, do ye?" pointing with his cane in the direction of the dictionary.

Being assured that he was free to use the book, he seated himself comfortably, and seemingly, with much interest, perused the pages of the book for some time.—Indianapolis News.

Leaves $50 to Burglars, Gets Note of Thanks

New York.—Arthur Bohm, who lives from mid-April to mid-October at Grand View, N. Y., near Nyack, where his daughter has a real estate business, has on his return to his Brooklyn home every fall for seven years left a $50 bill on the middle of the living-room table with this note:

"I have taken all the valuables from this house. Only the furniture remains. Please accept this bank note for your trouble in breaking in. Please depart without doing any damage. Thank you. ARTHUR BOHM."

Mr. Bohm started the practice after a number of his neighbors' homes at Grand View had been pretty well wrecked by thieves looking for plunder during the winter months.

Every spring until now he has gone back to Grand View to find his note with the $50 attached still on the table. But when he arrived in Grand View from Brooklyn with his wife and daughter the $50 was gone.

Across the face of the note was scrawled in lead pencil the word, "Thanks."

MISTAKE NOT TO "KEEP" BIRTHDAYS

Bond of Affection in Remembering Anniversary.

"Do you still keep your birthday?" asked a woman of me the other day. "Of course I do," I replied.

"I stopped that years ago," she told me. She could not have been thirty! When she had gone I began to wonder at what age a woman should cease to celebrate her birthday. The more I pondered it over, writes Mrs. Nestor Noel in the New York Times, the more I came to the conclusion that she should keep it as long as she lives.

There are several reasons for this. If she be the mother of a family the fact of her birthday being a day of celebration teaches unselfishness to the children. For weeks beforehand they can plan for mother's birthday, working at home-made gifts in secret, asking themselves what she would like and being ready to give up little pleasures for her sake.

There are lonely women who have no children. Wouldn't it be a great thing if some one in the village or street where they lived found out their birthdays and arranged with other people to give them joyous surprise? Flowers can be given to the women who are well to do. Cakes and other practical things quickly suggest themselves when the woman is less well off.

Men do not care for these things so much. They forget their birthdays. We know they often forget their wedding anniversaries.

This is a fact: Men do forget these things. Women, however, are different. I think that even the modern woman clings more to the old traditions than a man, and even if she says nothing, yet in her heart there is an ache somewhere when her birthday has been forgotten.

I remember once going to see an old friend of mine. Business kept me from getting to her house until six o'clock. She had a husband and nine children. When I came so late and presented my gift with my birthday wishes her eyes filled with tears as she looked at me gratefully.

"You are the only person who remembered my birthday," she said.

The gift I had taken her was of no importance. I have forgotten what it was. She was quick to see and appreciate the thought behind the gift. She asked me to stay for tea. As she hastened to get it ready three of her children whispered together and then ran across to a store. Later they came back with a present from each.

"You see," I remarked, "your children have not forgotten you." "They would never have thought of my birthday," she whispered, "if it hadn't been for you." Then her mother-love made her make much of their gifts, but I wished that they had not needed to be reminded of their mother's birthday by a friend who, however dear, did not belong to the family.

We want our nearest and dearest to remember us first. Even grandmothers should celebrate their birthdays. It is so good for the rest of the family. It knits them together with a common bond of love.

I mean to keep my birthday as long as I live. Even if I should have seventy grandchildren and they should each present me with a pair of slippers, I would be thankful. Not that I should need all those slippers, but I would certainly need all the love that prompted the gifts.

Women always need love; they cannot live without it. Let them not be quick to say: "I never keep my birthday." When they allow people to forget their birthdays they lose the manifestation of a great deal of love.

Bad Bargain for Railroad

A young man's courtship is costing the Ludlow (Vt.) railroad $25.48 a week, according to engineers' estimates. It's like this: A youthful swain in Proctorsville is courting a young woman in Ludlow. He signals the express at Proctorsville to take him to Ludlow, paying a round trip fare of 36 cents. Returning to Proctorsville he signals another express train. The cost of stopping the two trains and starting them again costs about $4 each night, according to the engineers, so that though the railroad receives $2.52 a week from the young man in fares, it pays out $28 a week for stopping its express trains.

Parachutes Annoy Town

It is illegal to fall out of an airplane or balloon in Oakland, Cal., without a permit, even if the fall is made in a parachute. City commissioners recently passed an ordinance to that effect and one also requiring owners of balloons and planes that carry passengers to post a $20,000 bond to protect, not the passengers, but the lives and property of those who remain on the ground.

The ordinance was made necessary, according to city officials, because five parachute jumpers fell heavily recently, all on one day. One crashed on a roof and the other four landed in expensive flower beds and shrubbery.

Bible Distribution

Eighteen thousand copies of the Bible have been distributed in the orphanages of the Near East relief during the past two years, according to a report from the overseas directors of that organization. The Bibles, printed in eight languages, were secured through the co-operation of the American and British Bible societies, the Greek and Armenian churches, and various co-operating religious bodies.

My Favorite Stories

By IRVIN S. COBB

One Detail Was Missing

On the historic afternoon when Jack Johnson fought Jim Jeffries in Nevada for the world's championship there was a baseball game at the old Polo grounds. In the press stand, among others, sat Sid Mercer, the sporting writer, and Franklin P. Adams, the column conductor. For some reason or other, ringside bulletins were not being received at the ball park. Naturally, the crowd wanted to know how the fight was going.

Several hundred spectators, drawn by the fact that telegraph instruments were clicking in the press stand, packed themselves solidly behind the wire netting in the hope of hearing tidings from Reno over the wire. Mercer and Adams got a joint inspiration. They pretended to be taking a ringside description off one of the instruments. First one would chant off a purely imaginary account of a round, and then the other would.

Now it so happened that Adams had a bet down on the negro to win, and accordingly favored the black contender. In his turn to "read" a round, he would depict Johnson as hammering Jeffries into a pulp. But Mercer, who was a partisan of Jeffries, would each time retaliaite with a spirited but, of course, purely fictitious account of how the white man, having rallied heroically, was now dealing mighty blows upon the head and body of the tottering, weakening black.

Naturally, the listening crowd was torn by conflicting emotions. Cheers and groans marked the utterances of the two gifted romancers. Eventually, when the multitude had grown so in numbers that the pressure of its bulk threatened to break down the netting, the conspirators decided it was time to bring their joke to a climax.

Mercer, cocking his head above an instrument as though the better to hear, began reciting, somewhat after this fashion:

"Round-seven! At-the-sound-of-the-bell-the-two-men-leap-to-the-center-of-the-ring! They-exchange-a-whirlwind-of-jabs-and-upper-cuts! The-fighting-is-the-fiercest-ever-seen-in-a-heavy-weight-contest! Suddenly-the-knock-out-blow-is-delivered-upon-the-point-of-the-jaw! The-defeated-man-drops-like-a-log! His-seconds-drag-his-unconscious-form-into-his-corner! Here he paused a bit, with the air of one who has completed a hard job, made as though to sit down.

From a thousand throats behind him one question arose in a mighty chorus: "Who wins?"

Dramatically Mercer raised his hand, for silence, and a deep hush befell.

"The dispatches did not state," he said, simply, and sat down again. (Copyright by the Central Press Association.)

Combating the Yellow Peril

Every time the government takes a census this story is revived, which means it enjoys a rejuvenated popularity at intervals of exactly ten years. When I catch myself laughing at it, I know that another decade has slipped by me unawares.

The story has to do with the enumerator who called at a humble home in the outskirts of Cincinnati, and there found the head of the family humped up over a large volume. It developed, in the course of the conversation, that the householder some months before had been induced by a traveling agent to invest in an encyclopedia, and that to get the worth of his money he had been reading the books of the set pretty constantly ever since. He was now full of facts, statistics and data.

In reply to the caller's questions he gave his name and age and his wife's name and age.

"How many infant children have you?" asked the census taker.

"I've got three," said the citizen. "And that's all there ever will be, too, you take it from me."

"What makes you so positive about that?" asked the visitor.

"I'll tell you why I were won't never be but three," said the man. "It's wrote down in this here book that every fourth child born in the world is Chinese."

The Identical Article

A Shakespearean actor was left stranded in a small town in Michigan. This was in the days when there still were Shakespearean actors.

He obtained board at the local hotel until a remittance arrived to take him back to Chicago. As he had no funds for tipping purposes he got scant attention from the servants.

One day he pushed and pushed the push button in his room without getting an answer. Then he got out of bed, put on his trousers and overcoat, turned the coat collar up about his bare throat and ventured through the hallway until he came to the round opening down into the office floor.

"Bellboy! Bellboy!" he called in his best speaking voice.

"Watcher want?" answered back a youthful menial impertinently.

"Bellboy," said the Thespian with much dignity, "I desire my laundry to be brought to me forthwith."

"G'wan!" said the boy. "You didn't have but half a shirt when you hit this town."

"That," said the actor, "is the laundry to which I refer."

TRADE SACRED RELICS FOR TICKET TO MOVIES

Children of Guam Are Keen for Wild West Dramas and Bathing Girl Pictures.

Honolulu.—An ancient sacred relic in exchange for a ticket to the movies is the latest tale to float up from the mysterious islands of the South seas, where a group of scientists is attempting to solve the problem of the origin of the Polynesian race.

It is told in a letter from one of the workers attached to the Bishop museum, Honolulu, and concerns Guam and the Chamorro children on the sun-baked shores of that island who will hunt assiduously for bits of weathered stone in order to enjoy viewing the cowboys, train wrecks, shooting scrapes and bathing girls that appear on the Guam screen as representing that far-away and unknown country, America.

The search is "hazardous" for the children because of the tradition that the strangely shaped stones which are in such great demand at the Agana "movie-house" belonged once to the "Taotao-Mona," or the "people of before time," who are feared so greatly that none of the adult residents dare touch the relics.

The stones are the implements and weapons left by the former inhabitants of the Marianas, who may have belonged to a race antedating the Polynesians, the scientists say.

Many varieties of the objects are necessary for the study of the habits and customs of the race, and the Bishop museum expedition has contracted with the Agana motion-picture theater in one of the strangest compacts ever signed.

Its terms provide for an exchange of the relics for free admission to the show, the museum to redeem the stones, most of which have come from "tabu" or forbidden spots. They will be studied carefully and perhaps in them will be found the clue that will lead to the origin of the Polynesian peoples.

Setting Eggs 50-50 on Sex, Experiments Prove

Washington.—The Department of Agriculture, under the direction of Secretary Jardine, has announced you cannot bet on the sex of a chicken within by the length, shape or weight of an egg.

Scientists, however, it was explained, are able to tell the sex of the chicken in the shell after seven or eight days of incubation.

The investigation just concluded by Dr. M. A. Jull, poultry husbandman, has proved beyond a doubt that there is nothing in the contention that the long, slim, heavy eggs produce roosters and the small and shorter ones pullets.

"It has been determined, however," says Doctor Jull, "that the greater the number of eggs a hen lays before being put into the breeding pen, the larger will be the proportion of females and the smaller the proportion of males."

SURELY "THE FRESHMAN" IS HAROLD LLOYD'S BEST.

Look at it any way you wish, you'll have to admit after you have seen Harold Lloyd's newest comedy, "The Freshman," now showing at the Metropolitan Theatre, that this world-renowned star has hit the top of the comedy field. Ever since "The Freshman" opened here, the audiences have been kept in a continual uproar. If this is not the funniest picture Lloyd has ever made, then this reviewer's funny bone is not working.

"The Freshman" tells the story of a young chap who goes to college and seeks recognition as the most popular boy in school. His code of life is of such a generous nature that he becomes the subject of ridicule among his fellow students. Just when everything seems to turn against him, he gets an opportunity to play in the season's most important foot ball game. What develops thereafter might better be told on the screen; as the hilarious scenes, thrills and suspense are almost indescribable. If you want to see Harold Lloyd at his best and in a role decidedly different from any previous picture, don't miss "The Freshman."

Harold Lloyd is certainly entitled to feel proud over his accomplishment of "The Freshman," which sent audiences at the Met theater yesterday out onto the street limp with laughing. The laughs start gently at first and work up so gradually and evenly that you don't realize what is happening to you until you find yourself sobbing, "Oh! Oh!" for more breath! Too hearty laughter is a joyous sort of agony no one resents.

The freshman, Harold Lamb, enters college with queer notions as to how a student should act to become the most popular chap to the campus. One of his ideas, gleaned from a movie is that one should do a fancy jig step every time he is introduced to anyone. This jig, and the fact that he tells every new acquaintance that he's just a regular fellow and they should step right and call him "Speedy," attracts the immediate attention of the school's chief joker, and after that poor Harold has no rest.

In the hope of popularity he does everything he is told to do. He attempts to make the football team, and is made water boy. He gives a big dance and is forced to attend in a suit that is only basted together. He makes a speech to the entire student body assembled to hear the dean's address. And he becomes the world's greatest single retail buyer of ice cream cones. Finally, however, he gets into a football game and this scrimmage brings "The Freshman" to a finish that is as exciting and thrilling as it is funny.

Everyone in the cast is excellent, and the college boys and co-eds look like the real thing—the best looking bunch of live wire youngsters you ever saw away from a campus. All hail to "The Freshman!" Let no one pass him by unseen!

Wild Parsnip Most Dangerous Plant

It Is Umbelliferous and Grows in Damp Meadows.

The most poisonous plant that grows in the United States is without doubt the cicutia, commonly known as "wild parsnip," or "water hemlock."
Cicutia is an umbelliferous plant and looks somewhat like the common garden parsnip. It grows mostly in damp meadows and along ditch banks. It does not have a tap root like the garden parsnip, but all of the different species grow from a root stalk to which are attached roots, which may be small or form a group of thick, fleshy fibers. The matured tops and seeds found in hay cause no trouble,
but the root-stalk and roots are violently poisonous. A part of one small root is sufficient to kill a horse. Most every summer we hear of people being fatally poisoned from tasting the root of "wild parsnip."

The young leaves in the early spring are also poisonous, especially for cattle. The symptoms are frothing at the mouth and violent convulsions.
When people are poisoned, if the stomach is quickly emptied by an emetic recovery usually takes place, but as horses and cattle are unable to empty the stomach, this remedy cannot be applied. Only the mildest cases of poisoning recover; the severe cases are hopeless. Every farmer and stockman should be able to identify our principal poisonous plants. Suspicious plants should be sent to the agricultural college for identification.

cultural college.

Rabbit Pelts Becoming of Much Value for Fur

The rabbit is one of the best animals to raise on a small scale or for the man that has a little time morning and evening to devote to something to give relief from business and also is a fine thing for the small rancher who has his own alfalfa or clover hay as rabbit pelts are becoming of more value and are being keenly sought after.

The New Zealand Red, New Zealand White and American Blue fill the bill as all-around utility rabbits. The Blue and White hides bring the top price, the Reds being a close second.
One writer says the Flemish is a very fast grower, after two months of age being far in advance of the smaller breeds.

Mower Wheel Makes Good as Cultivator in Corn

The problem that confronts the farmer after plowing the corn the last time, as to the manner in which he will control the moisture and kill the weeds, is no small one. The corn is too high to be plowed with a cultivator, and then, too, the farmer wishes to leave the ground as level as possible. Both of these problems may be easily controlled by dragging an old mower-machine wheel between the rows. This serves the purpose very well. It will help in controlling the moisture; make the ground easy to till in the spring or fall, by leaving it level and free from ridges, and will control effectively the young, tender weeds if done before the weeds get a strong growth.

Supplements Needed as Pastures Begin to Dry

Soiling crops or corn silage are recommended as supplements for drought damaged pastures used for dairy herds. If the dairyman lacks corn silage and is not in position to feed a soiling crop, he should give his cows a grain ration, says O. G. Schaefer of the University farm, Minnesota university. For average or low producing cows on pastures badly burned the grain ration should consist of equal parts of corn and oats or equal parts of barley and oats. For cows of more than average production one pound of oil-meal should be added to the ration for every five or six pounds of the corn and oats or barley and oats. Where no pasture is left at all the cows should be fed about as in winter.

Farm Hints

Name your farm and adopt a trade mark for your goods.

Destruction of volunteer wheat
means less injury from Hessian fly.

Heavy feeding and no exercise on Sunday is equally bad for horses and men.

The farmer with several sources of income is the one who is reaping the largest profits.

A poultry house is a good investment if it protects the flock. In order to lay, the hens must be comfortable.

Sharp knives at all times help greatly to make fine silage and much time is saved by having an emery wheel attachment with the rig.

Most farmers think late afternoon is the best time to cut alfalfa. The day is apt to look better for it, and more of the leaves will stay on.

To keep mice and rats from chewing harness, place a little salt on the harness close by the harness as they chew the leather to get salt.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;

- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

E. ROBINSON SHOOTS HIMSELF THROUGH HEAD

Ill Health Since Death of His Mother Is Cause Attributed—32 Caliber Revolver Used By Unfortunate Man—Found In Garage In Rear of Father's Home Early Monday Morning.

In ill health for a year, since the death of his mother, Ellwyn Robinson, sign painter, married, committed suicide by shooting himself through the brain, presumably about midnight, Sunday. He was found by members of his family, Monday morning, about 5 o'clock, in the garage to the rear of the Andrew Robinson home, 202 Church street.

The unfortunate man had used a 32 caliber revolver which was found in his hand. The bullet entered the head above and behind the right ear. Death was almost instantaneous. No note was left explaining the rash deed, but members of the family stated Monday that he had been in ill health for about a year.

Coroner Everett Robbins was called about 6:45 a. m. and after a thorough investigation pronounced the death a case of suicide. The man had been dead about four or five hours, it was estimated by the coroner.

Robinson's work as a sign painter took him over a large part of Ohio in this section where he numbered his friends by the score. The news of his death Monday morning came as a distinct shock to all.

In the passing of "Roby" as he was familiarly known, his friends suffer a distinct loss.

Ellwyn W. Robinson was born in August, 1887, in South Union township, the son of Andrew Robinson and his wife Jennie Clark Robinson. The greater part of his life had been spent in Chillicothe where he was a member of the Elks, Masons and the Shriners. During the World War he was a member of the Eighty-third Division. He leaves to mourn their loss his father, his wife, Marie (Caldwell) Robinson, one son Clark Lee Robinson, two brothers, John Drew Robinson and Clark W. Robinson, all of this city.

The funeral arrangements will be announced later.—Chillicothe News-Advertiser.

BACK TO NATURE MOVE MEANS JAIL

Thought He Was Promenading South Sea Island.

Chicago.—Clothes make the man, sure enough, but then again there are times when the lack of clothes makes a man's undoing.

At least so it was early in the morning when William Rosnow, thirty-four, of 648 West Madison street, believing he was promenading the shores of a South Sea island, took a little walk, minus a few of his clothes, and finally landed in a restaurant at 10 South Canal street with nothing on but a very attractive mustache and a shirt that had shrunk just a little bit in the wash.

"I knew I shouldn't have had that last drink," groaned one of the night owls, as he fell off a quick lunch stool. "Where did you get that shirt?"

And Policeman William Granger reached for his gun. As he did Rosnow, who, rumor has it, was just a little bit under the influence of liquor, a strip poker game and jealousy of women's abbreviated styles, reached for his shirt.

Officer Granger, realizing the seriousness of the situation and fearing that a shot might strip Rosnow of still more of his shirt, brought a little football into play and made a flying tackle.

A few minutes later Rosnow and Granger arrived in the Desplaines street police station, the policeman leading his prisoner by the mustache. "Couldn't even keep his shirt on him," groaned the officer.

KEEPING WELL

EPIDEMIC HICCUP

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

EVERYBODY, at some time or other, has had hiccups. Generally, these annoying spasms are caused by over-eating or overdrinking, the presence of gas in the stomach, nervousness or excitement. Evidently, they are as old as the human race. In the days of Plato, the Greek philosopher, Eryximachos, an Athenian physician, told a friend of his who was attacked with hiccup at a banquet to hold his breath, to gargle his throat or to tickle his nose with a feather. About the same kind of advice that the victim of today gets from his friends.

But sometimes the hiccups don't stop. Every few days the newspapers contain accounts of someone who has had hiccups for days and who cannot stop. Stranger still are epidemics of hiccups. Such an epidemic occurred in Winnipeg in 1919, when over a thousand cases were reported.

Hiccup, of course, is not a disease. It is merely a spasm of the diaphragm, the muscular partition between the chest cavity and the abdominal cavity. This spasm may be slight and temporary or it may be the symptom of some serious disease. It is common in some nervous disorders or it may occur in the last stages of some diseases. But for hiccup to occur among hundreds of people at once is most unusual.

The three Winnipeg epidemics all began in November, reached their height by the first of December and disappeared by the first of January. All ages were affected from a child of ten to an old man of eighty-seven. Strange to say, over 90 per cent were males.

No definite cause could be found. But each epidemic was closely connected with an epidemic of influenza.

Influenza is a strange disease. When it came to this country in 1850, it was called the epizootic. After running all over the country like wild fire, it became milder and less frequent and finally died out entirely. For many years, no one ever heard of it. Then in 1889-1890 it suddenly appeared as la grippe.

Strangely enough, this disease never seems the same. Some years most of the afflicted have all the symptoms of a bad cold. Another year it will resemble bronchitis or pneumonia. Then it will be marked by nausea and vomiting or so-called "stomach flu," while again it will seem to spend its energies on the intestinal tract. It has been noticed that, at some times and places, its effects are largely on the brain and nerves. Most cases of so-called sleeping sickness are due to influenza infection. It is this form which is most frequently accompanied by hiccup. None of the cases in Winnipeg was fatal, although several died of sleeping sickness. Altogether a strange and mysterious sickness.

Old Law on "indecent Music" Puzzles Capital

Washington.—The Washington police have found still another "don't" in the official records, and are preparing to enforce it if they can agree on what it prohibits.

From a musty file of police regulations someone unearthed one forbidding "indecent music." Evidently "indecent" music without words is meant, and some authorities say there's no such thing while those who take the contrary view are far apart in defining a standard of decency.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Hart held words are wholly unnecessary to make music indecent.

"You know what I mean," he said, "that hootchy-kootchy sort of intonation."

Mrs. Mina Van Winkle, head of the policewomen, had an entirely different definition. "I refer," she said, "to that tom-tom sort of oriental music that makes men forget home and babies. The desert natives play that sort of dancing, but they have self-respect enough to dance by themselves. They would be shocked to see the way our boys and girls hug each other and vibrate to the tune of those compelling pieces."

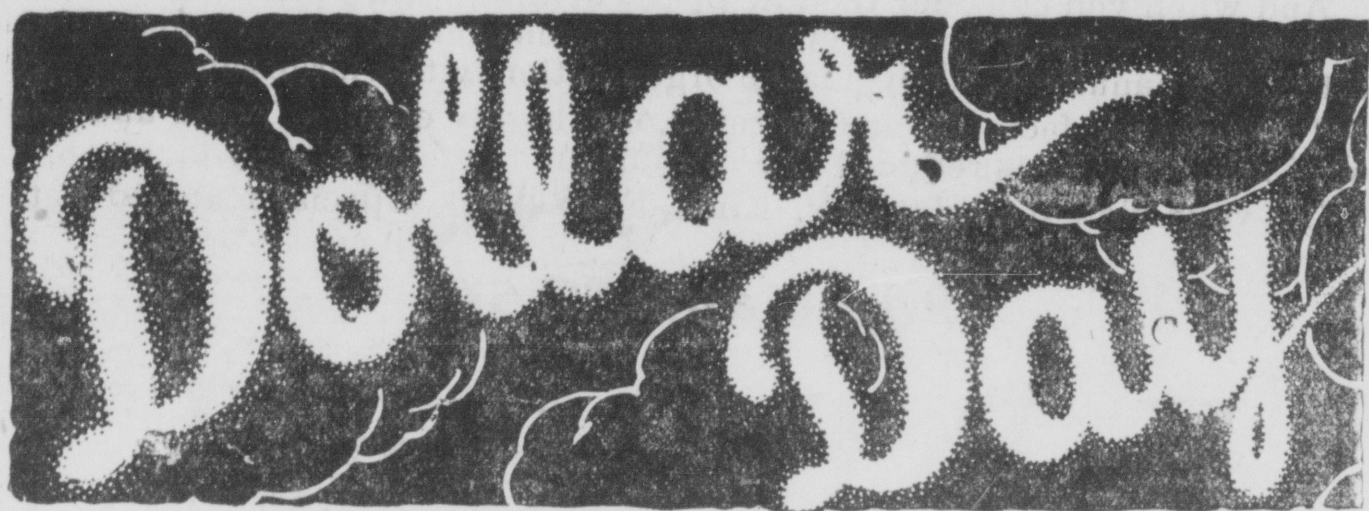

Sergeant Phillips, the police psychopathic expert, inclines to the belief that while there is a lot of "crazy" music, it would be difficult to prove that any of it is "indecent."

Dying, Wants Pets Killed to Join Her in Heaven

New York.—Mme. Kitty Berger, harpist, who died of heart disease in the Presbyterian hospital, left word that her four cats should be killed at once so they might go to heaven with her, her friend, Mrs. Adolph Schminke, said. Mrs. Schminke said she gave the cats to the American Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, to be killed.

Mrs. Schminke added that when Mademoiselle Berger was told, two years ago, to go to the hospital for treatment, she refused to do so, saying no one else could care for her cats, and that before her death flowers were brought to her from the grave of her favorite cat.

Mademoiselle Berger, in private life Mrs. Paul Paneritus, was born in Austria, where her parents were members of the household of Emperor Francis Joseph. She played before the emperor, Queen Victoria, Queen Alexandra and President Roosevelt.

"Oyez" was the expression formerly employed by court officers or criers in announcing the opening of court. It was introduced into England by the Normans, together with other legal expressions and forms. Dog Adopts Chicks

Reversing the recent case in which a Rhode Island Red hen adopted a litter of puppies a four-year-old poodle, owned by Theodore Gauthier of West Springfield, Mass., is playing mother to a brood of 15 chicks, the Philadelphia Public Ledger says.

The chicks, incubator born, attracted the poodle's attention when brought home by Mr. Gauthier. Finally the poodle was allowed to adopt them after much whining and refusing to eat. The chicks are being brought up with an abnormal tendency to cleanliness, for Fifi licks them as she would a puppy.

ROCKEFELLER MEETS OIL DRIVERS ON ROAD

Magnate Gives Employee and Rival New Dimes.

New York.—Harold Riley, who was driving a big Standard Oil tank truck, stopped as he rounded a turn on the hilly road between Riverdale and Bloomingdale, N. J., and came to a stop as he saw a gasoline truck of the Tidal Oil company approaching. Charley Stout of Dundee Lakes was driving it.

"Leave any business for me?" said Charley, coming to a stop.

"I pretty well oiled up the whole country," said the Standard Oil man.

A costly closed car coming from Riverdale stopped between them. A door opened and an old man in a gray cap and gray duster stepped briskly out on the road.

Pleased by Recognition.

"We're lost boys," he said to the two drivers. Then, addressing himself to the driver of the red Standard

John D. Rockefeller.

Oil truck, he asked: "Can you tell me the way back to the Oakland-Suffern road?"

"Go back to Riverdale and take the right turn, Mr. Rockefeller," said Riley.

"You recognize me, eh?" said the oil man delightedly, extending his hand.

"I certainly do," said Riley. "Glad to meet any oil man," said Mr. Rockefeller, shaking hands also with Stout, who had jumped down from his seat on the rival truck.

"Always glad to meet a man in the oil business, but, of course (shaking the Standard Oil driver's hand again), the Standard Oil is my first love."

Dimes Begin to Appear.

"Just a minute, boys," he said to the drivers. "Now, Riley, that's for you."

He gave the Standard Oil driver one of his famous fresh minted dimes. Then he inquired about their families—found Stout had one child and Riley none, so he gave each of them a dime "for the wife" with his "compliments" and an extra dime for the baby.

Texas Cowboy, 95, Still Active, Rides the Range

Childress, Texas.—Supple as a youth in muscle, vigorous and hearty, H. R. Mangum, ninety-five years old, is still riding the range on the big ranch of the Smith brothers, near here.

He is said to be the oldest cowboy still in active service in the country. Mangum has been a cowhand ever since he came to Texas from South Carolina, three-quarters of a century ago. He was well along toward middle life when the famous Chisholm trail was established. He went up the trail with herds of cattle many times.

In his early life he worked on ranches in the southern part of Texas. As the wild lands of the more western parts of the state were opened up he went with the venturesome cattlemen into their new grazing territory. He was upon the frontier when Indian raids were common and when buffaloes populated the unbroken region by countless thousands.

Mangum says that he has observed no set of rules of living. He "went the usual paces" of a cowboy in the stirring days and has devoted himself to hard work and life in the open air.

Boy Finds Pail of Gold While Diving in California

Marysville, Cal.—"Rainbow's End" has been found—the old legend is true.

The pot of gold lay at the bottom of a 12-foot pool of water in Dry creek, near Robbins.

Twelve boys of Yuba county found it as their flashing bodies plunged deeply into the limpid water—and one of them bumped his head upon reality, in the shape of an old, rusty tin pail.

Half filled with nuggets and dust of gold, the value of the find has not yet been estimated. It may be worth thousands. The boys are not particularly interested in how many.

The old pail bears on its side the legend of a man's name, now undecipherable, and the date "1868."

SHENANDOAH'S GIRDER WAS BROKEN

NO EVIDENCE OF DEFECTIVE WORKMANSHIP AT HEARING

Commander Sidney M. Kraus of the Special Investigation Board Made Statement Before the Naval Court of Inquiry At Lakehurst, N. J., Tuesday--the Ship Collapsed Shortly Before or Simultaneously After A Very Considerable Rotational Oscillation.

Lieutenant Commander C. E. Rosen-dahl, senior surviving officer, objected to these going into the record saying the men had been told that they be used only by the men later in refreshing their recollections. They finally were admitted as memoranda and not as evidence and they were withheld from publication.

JACOB CARLE

Died at Home in Chillicothe of Diabetes--Funeral Services Tuesday.

A failure of one or more girders forward of amidships caused the wrecking of the airship Shenandoah in the opinion of Commander Sidney M. Kraus of the special investigation board, who testified Tuesday before the naval court of inquiry.

Basing his opinion upon a personal observation of the wreck and upon information about the disaster as he could collect, he said this failure occurred simultaneously with or shortly before or shortly after some very considerable rotational oscillation of the ship in the line squall near Ava, Ohio, September 3.

This breakage resulted in the nearly simultaneous failure of the frames holding the control car up under the forward end of the ship, he said, adding that the control car then probably swung by the after control wires, which sheared off a number of frames before it fell, carrying Lieutenant Commander Zachary Lansdowne and other officers and men to death.

Officers who salvaged the forward and after wrecked sections testified that the aluminum alloy of which the girders and beams were made was much more brittle near the sections where the ship broke than in other sections. They said there was no visible evidence that there had been crystallization or any erosion of the metal and they offered no theory as to the cause.

Commander Kraus, who observed the construction of the Los Angeles in Germany for 15 months, said that in his examination of the wreckage he found no evidence of any defective workmanship. He also said he did not believe any of the helium gas cells had burst due to internal pressure, adding that those in the stern and bow, which necessarily were subjected to the greatest pressure, were intact.

Besides hearing Commander Kraus and the salvage officers the court received detailed report from Commander Jacob H. Klein, president of the special investigating board sent to Ohio and heard the stories of three other surviving officers which corroborated in the main the accounts given by the large number of officers and men survivors who passed before the court in quick succession at the opening day Tuesday.

The last of the witnesses immediately available were heard Tuesday and while the court decided to meet again Wednesday its procedure is uncertain. It may examine much of the Shenandoah wreckage which arrived at the air station at Lakehurst, New Jersey Tuesday.

Announcement was made during the day that the scene within the great hull of the Shenandoah would be re-enacted for the court, with the interior of the dirigible Los Angeles as the stage. This may take place tomorrow. The survivors will take position at the stations or places where they were just before the wreck and follow thru the actions they took up to the time the breaking up of the ship and later.

After the last of the narratives of the survivors had been placed into the record there came a tense moment as Commander Klein placed before the court the official records of his investigating boards. These include memoranda made by some of the survivors immediately after the wreck.

Jacob Carle, a former resident of Circleville, died in Chillicothe on Saturday, September 19, at 7:30 o'clock of diabetes, aged 68 years. He was a son of Joseph and Caroline Carle and was born in Alsace Lorraine, France; he came to Circleville with his parents at an early age. He had been a resident of Columbus for many years; he was twice married being survived by his second wife, Mary Entrane Carle and the following children: Margaret, wife of Charles Woodbine; Etta, wife of William Herman; Minnie, wife of Frank Rockey, of Columbus; and Sister Mary Adelaide, of the Dominican order, a teacher in St. Francis' school, Columbus. Of his immediately family he is survived by one brother, Theodore Carle, of Circleville township and one sister, Mrs. Patrick Glacken, of Columbus.

The funeral was held Tuesday morning at 8:30 o'clock from St. Peter's church, Chillicothe, Rev. Father Kuskamp officiating, burial in St. Margaret's cemetery.

Fashion's Path Leads to Printed Flannels

Fashion, having lost its heart and head to printed silks in summer, is faithful to their memory--hence the success of the new printed flannels that succeed them. Here is a dark frock, printed in black. It has collar and cuffs of fine embroidered batiste and a black silk jabot.

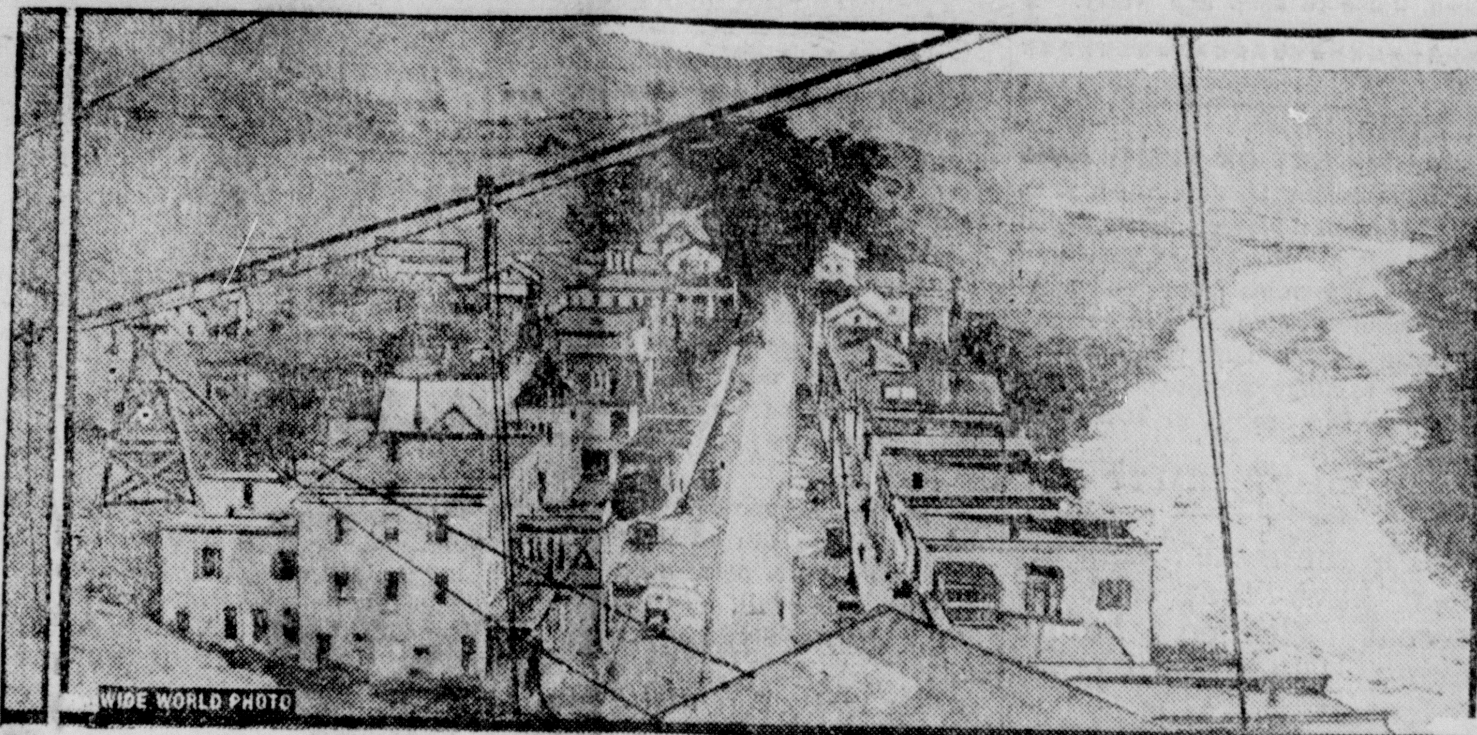

ONE HUNDRED YEARS OLD. Columbus, O., Sept. 22 (UP).--Worry is what makes people grow and you can live to be 100 years old like I am if you can make yourself contented. Mrs. Susan Kennedy of Columbus said Tuesday as she reached the century mark.

Mrs. Kennedy had ten children, never dieted, eats what she pleases, goes to bed at 10 p. m. every night, never voted and is interested in football and baseball.

For breakfast she usually has watermelon and three pieces of bacon. In the evening she likes ice cream.

"I don't feel like 100 years old," she said as he dimming eyes circled children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren gathered for her century anniversary.

Artificial Lake Will Engulf This Village

The little village of Gilboa, N. Y., once a prosperous farming center, soon will be the bottom of an artificial lake 150 feet deep, five miles long, and holding 22,000,000,000 gallons of water for the supply of New York City. The town dates from 1760. The waters of Schoharie creek, blocked by an enormous dam, will be carried from this artificial lake through eighteen miles of tunnel to feed the Ashokan reservoir. This view of Gilboa is from the top of the dam.

LAND OFFICE BUSINESS AT WRECK SCENE

S. government for $500 damages at Lakehurst investigation Monday, was sorely disappointed when Commander Jacob H. Klien, president of the special board which investigated the wreck, recommended that the claim be disallowed. Niswonger showed Commander Klien his bank book, in which the deposits showed that he had collected $5,000 on admissions to tourists and concessions for soft drinks. REAL ESTATE APPRAISALS POSTPONED

The new real estate appraisals will not appear on the Pickaway county tax duplicate for 1925. This has been decided by County Auditor Bryce Briggs, as the state tax commission has officially extended the time for completion of the work to January 1, 1926.

The appraisers have nearly finished their work in the city but the county appraisers have practically just begun and are not in the heart of it as yet.

While the field work will be completed this year, it will take months to go over the immense mass of data, whip it into shape, compile it and then have it gone over by a board of revision.

The appraisers of the utilities industries and county real estate are now hard at work, and it is thought that their report will be ready by the first of the month.

The clerks in the county auditor's office, says Deputy T. D. Krinn, are nearly thru computing one-third of the county for the December tax duplicate.

EXCAVATORS MAKE FINDS IN MOUNDS

Secrets of Ages Revealed as Scientists Delve Deeper Into Treasure.

Excavators of the Great Seip Mound near Bainbridge are rearranging their summer finds and discovering further secrets hidden by the ages which will be deciphered during the winter months and woven into the chain by which American antiquity eventually may be lifted into the realm of history.

Preliminary survey of artifacts brought by Curator H. C. Shetrone to the Ohio Archaeological and Historical Museum at the conclusion of the summer's exploration gives promise of a winter of revelations.

Mr. Shetrone declared that in all probability there will be no startling finds, but that people of his science are contented with small finds, which filled together, add to their knowledge and lead to conclusions about the pre-Columbian inhabitants of America.

Ever since 1846 excavations have been made in Ohio mounds, he said, and gradually the findings have been worked into a tentative history which from time to time is corrected and checked.

At the ceremonial pipes and ornaments found in the Seip mound were being arranged it became evident that the people who had fashioned them were of a culture not as high as those the Hopewell groups.

"Several of the finds have been unique and unprecedented," Mr. Shetrone said, "but the fineness of their art is not quite up to the Hopewells."

"The pipe bowls and bird carvings on the tortoise shell ornaments indicate a migration of people from the south, for their types coincide with the remains of the race found south of Tennessee and not those of the Hopewell mounds, which show the highest culture," said Mr. Shetrone.

As an example of the new discoveries of the last few days Mr. Shetrone cited the finding Tuesday of a faint imprint upon a copper plate, which is being scrutinized closely. The plate was one of those found beneath the skulls of the four princes in the "burial of the pearls." The imprint represents loops, scrolls, circles and curves, believed by the archaeologists to be the impression of a regal shawl worn by one of the princes as a part of his burial robe. H. R. Goodwin of the Archaeological society, will endeavor to reconstruct the design.

All of the ceremonial pipes are carved from stone and weigh from six to nine pounds. The bowl of one is 15 inches long.

All of the carvings represent animals. One of them depicts a dog devouring a human head. The animal is holding the inverted skull between its forepaws. In the open mouth of another dog are carefully carved teeth, showing that the mound builders studied the physical features and believed in representing them accurately in their sculpture work. The front teeth are the short incisors. Next are the long tusk-like canines. Behind them are the molars and double molars in proper order and number.

The image of a bear is carved on the longest of the pipes, which measures 15 inches from snout to tail. Another bowl represents an owl, with unmistakable features revealed in its beak, large eyes and feathers. The owl pipe-head had been painted red, and still a reddish cast. The widest of the ceremonial pipes is that of the spread-eagle, which measured ten inches between wing tips.

"As the ancient Americans smoked these pipes, the bowls were rested on the ground," said Mr. Shetrone, in explaining their utility, in spite of their weight. "They were used in ceremonials. For their ready use the mound builders carried lighter pipes with them."

COMFORT BAGS

For the Needy Survivors of the World War.

Comfort bags for soldiers confined in the various government hospitals, were made by the members of the auxiliary of the American Legion at a called meeting last evening at the home of Mrs. E. E. Prose. Nine bags were made and filled with various articles selected from a list furnished by the authorities. Handkerchiefs, washcloths, soap, knives, scissors, needlebooks, thread, memo-books, cards of buttons and stationery, which were all donated by the members, filled the bags.

Mrs. Prose as hostess, proved very solicitous and the evening was thoroughly enjoyed by all members present, as well as being a very profitable one. The next regular meeting, which will be held next Monday evening, will be at the home of Mrs. Charles Smith in East Mound street, as the improvements in the Post Room at the hall are not complete.

Resolution Too Late

The resolution to avoid an evil is seldom framed till the evil is so far advanced as to make avoidance impossible.

Woman's Stern Eye
Tames Wild Man

San Antonio, Tex.—"Como," the wild man, captured in the depths of Africa, is a wild man no longer. Some time ago he was chained to a post in one of the carnival tents at the Fiesta de San Jacinto in this city. Perspiration streamed down his almost nude brown body and he shook his mane in beastly defiance at the crowds.

Mrs. Keeton had been taking in the carnival when she was attracted by groans from the "wild man's" tent.

She went in to see and was warned not to get too close to "Como." And then "Como" turned a pair of blue eyes at her and exclaimed: "Why, mamma, what are you doing here?" Mrs. Keeton took her son, James, sixteen, home to soap and water.

FIRST AIRPLANE
THIEVES ARE UNDER ARREST

Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 21.—(U.P.)—Victor Verschoore and Ernest Conway have confessed, according to police, to being Michigan's first airplane thieves.

According to Harry Brooks and Hoyt Brown, of Birmingham, who assert they are owners of the plane, it was stolen August 29 from Overcashier Field, north of Detroit.

Repainted, with a repaired propeller, it was being used to carry passengers on trips from a field on a country road near here.

WORDS OF WISDOM IN MOTHER'S WILL

Short Document Worthy of Place in Literature.

Worth more than all her personal belongings was the compact of love, piety, faith and common sense which a New York woman left her family. Like all the great things of life, the message is simple, and valuable enough as an item of interest to the public at large to find space in the newspapers. The letter was written by Mrs. Lydia Harding Hammond, widow of the Rev. John Dennis Hammond, a Methodist minister, to be read by the children after her death. It runs as follows:

"Dear Children—I've just made my will, and this is to tell you what I want done with my personal belongings. Don't keep anything just because it was mine; they are just things, and worn and shabby at that; love doesn't need such things for remembrance.

"Most of my books are old and many of them I haven't looked into for years. I have loved and kept them because they have enlarged my life. Henry is to have them and my Bible, typewriter and Verdun vase.

"I won't be separated from any of you, dear children. I'll just be closer to God and will understand better the ways in which prayers and faith can open ways through which God can help you and I'll be able at least to love you with all my heart and without anything in that love that will make you feel as if I wanted to control you or bother you.

"Bury my body as cheaply as you can and forget it. Don't wear mourning, unless, of course, 'Lynx' wants to. And think of me as alive, alive beyond your farthest thought, and near, and loving you, and well at last, far as the winds of heaven and learning more and more the things I want to know and growing more toward what God wants me to become.

"I think, maybe, John will have our home ready when I come and we'll have a real home at last.

"Love one another. Hold fast to that whether you understand one another or not, and remember nothing really matters except being kind to one another and to all the world as far as you can reach.

"Your Lovingest Mother."

Such faith as this Methodist minister's wife displays, says the Boston Globe, "is the best evidence of those things this woman believed. She lived them and her faith revealed through her will shines like a star. Here in very truth is the victory that overcometh the world, the life eternal, lived now in the midst of time." Says the New York Sun:

"We prefer to accept this letter as more nearly revealing the spirit which today generally animates and inspires American family life than to join those who see in occasional records of domestic discord, parental inattention and filial neglect true indexes of the national character. The beauty of faith, and of hope, and of unselfish devotion its simple phrases record are found in countless households from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Lakes to the Gulf. The power to set forth the sentiments of loyalty and virtues as Mrs. Hammond set them forth is possessed by few, and this gives to her letter a unique and universal value."—Literary Digest.

Slip of Girl Awarded
Grand Prix de Rome

Paris.—French women are exulting over the latest feminine triumph.

Twenty-two of thirty-two graybeards have awarded the coveted Grand Prix de Rome—the highest art recompense in France—to a slip of a girl not yet twenty-one years old, Mlle. Odette Pauvert.

Although not the first woman to win the honor of a sojourn at Villa Medici—one sculptress and two musicians preceded her—she is the first woman painter considered worthy to represent French talent in the Eternal city. The painting which won her the prize is entitled "The Legend of St. Roman."

The girl is in art a mystic. She has already painted several religious pictures, one of which won a medal at the last Paris salon.

Outside of her art Odette Pauvert is a typical modern French girl. She swims almost as well as she paints, and is as much at home in a dance hall as in a studio.

Official Language Irks
Woman Weather Clerk

Buxton, England.—The only woman weather clerk in England, Miss E. W. Pilkington, has grown tired of the official language of daily weather bulletins issued from headquarters, and has instituted a new departure, which, while pleasing the populace of the district, does not exactly meet with official approval.

Miss Pilkington favors an up-to-date style in forecasting the weather, one of her latest reading:

"Temperature: There is an acute shortage of thermos in the district. Winds: Still of an oriental character. Pressure: A steady, reliable worker. Local trend: Overflows with happiness. Inference: We are qualifying for the final of the weather championship."

Another was worded: "Temperature: Every day in every way it grows warmer and warmer. Inference: All the weather factors are decked out in their finest garb. The specter at the feast is too shadowy to worry us."

Hailstorms Come by Day
It is a curious fact, but scientists seem agreed that four out of five hailstorms occur in the day time and those during the day are usually the most intense and damaging. This fact is quite true irrespective of the sections of the country in which such storms are studied.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Hints Worth While to Amateur Dressmakers
Amateur dressmakers often find a difficulty in getting the necks of frocks quite right, especially when using soft material of the kind that stretches. It is easy to make a mistake in cutting out the neck, and to find when trying on the frock that the material has given, so that the neck is much too low. It is an easy mistake to make, but not so easy to remedy, for these straight kimono frocks can be completely spoiled by a wrong neck line.
A good plan is to decide on the shape of opening required, then, measuring carefully, run a strong tacking thread round the line where you are going to cut, and then cut above it. If you are sure of your neck line you can even sew the binding along one side of the material before cutting out, then cut, and finish binding quickly before the material can slip at all.
For a pattern that needs to be fitted on the wearer, it is a good rule to cut as little as possible, just allowing enough space for the head to get through before fitting; then cut further as required, and finish as quickly as possible.

Milady's New Belts Are Narrow and Decorative
The new belts are narrow, confining themselves to the widths between one and two inches. However, the fact that there is little of them in no way interferes with the trend toward ornamentation, and these narrow strips are replete with trimming. They may have a bead or clip edge, or if the center is to be trimmed they sometimes have pinked edges with a bit of cut work.
Hand painting is noted on many of the fall belts. Some of these have matching pocket ornaments, and collars and cuffs. These, as a rule, are suede, each object bearing a cluster of brilliant flowers.
Pencil blue is one of the favored belt colors. Others are green, brown and purple, with black patent forming many of the children's belts.
A belt of two colors has edges and tabs of tan leather, while the body of the belt is red kid. The tan tabs end in arrow points, which slip through eyelets of the kid. The buckle on this 1 1/4-inch belt is metal.
The ring type fastening with snaps is favored. There also are metal and covered buckles shown. Nail-head and silver-spot effects adorn many of the suede models, and one belt with pinked edge has gilt all around.
Overlays of color frequently trim the models of gold and silver, as well as comprising the body of belts where the gilded leather is used as ornamentation.

Frocks Disappointing,
Paris Writer Asserts
So far evening frocks on display or even in prospect at most of the salons are disappointing, says a Paris fashion correspondent in the New York Times. Some are frankly ugly. There is a striving for the bizarre. Most people will be sorry to hear that we are threatened with a return to the excessively low U-shaped back, which displays all the ugliest features of that part of the anatomy. A mode that even few beautiful women can wear with the best effect.
High in front, the new evening dresses show a tendency to narrowness across the chest, and are still sleeveless. They are mostly severely plain at the top, all the trimming being on the bottom of the skirt, where at dinners, at the theater, and even at table in a dancing club, it cannot be seen at all. Many of them are a frank return to the shaded-rainbow idea, and these are all pale at the top and darker at the bottom. Even their creators admit that they will have to offer some alternative to them later.

FROM A MAN WHO KNOWS

In discussing the subject of State Versus Federal Regulation in the Transformation of the Power Industry to Central Generation and Interconnection of Systems, Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, in a recent address said:
"I do not agree with the conclusion that federal regulation is necessary."
"I can see no reason for the imposition of a superior regulation, merely because Congress may have the power to exercise its authority under the commerce clause."
"The essence of regulation lies in a tight grip on the concern that actually deals with the consumer."
"Power is, by necessity" bound to be local in its districts—as to its service, its generation and distribution.
"Nothing will produce worse service than to attempt to transfer local problems to absentee solution at Washington."
"Nothing could be a more hideous extension of centralization in the federal government than to undermine state utility commissions and state responsibilities."
"No one can survey the work of the state commissions and the instructive series of court decisions concerning their rulings as a whole, without realizing that we are gradually developing a science of regulation and of understanding on one hand of the means of drawing the fine line between minimum rates to the people and on the other hand of such a reasonable profit to the industry as will stimulate its advancement."
"It is my belief that the public service commissions with very little just criticism are proving themselves fully adequate to control the situation."

Earth's Population
Ernest George Ravenstein, geographer and statistician, estimated the population of the earth at 1,487,900,000 in 1890, and his figures stood unchanged for some years. Another computation made in the early '90s put the total at 1,440,650,000. Estimates of the world's population today range from 1,750,000,000 to 1,850,000,000.

PLAN SANITARIUM ON MOUNT POPOCATEPETL

Will Be Erected at Altitude of 17,843 Feet.

Mexico City.—At an altitude of 17,843 feet, near the snow-covered peak of the volcano Mount Popocatepetl, practical use is to be made of the romantic lure of the "mountain that smokes," as Popocatepetl is referred to frequently.

The ministry of public works makes the announcement that an offer has been received from British capitalists for the construction of a sanatorium above the snow line of the mountain to be used by tubercular patients.

The plan includes the building of an extraordinarily complicated aerial railway for the ascent of the mountain. Part of this line is to be an ordinary funicular or cog incline railway. This is to reach as high as the grades up the mountain's side will permit. From there on an aerial line, cars to be run on a cable, much like elevators dropped into mine shafts, will make the further ascent possible.

The investment is to reach $500,000.

The Popocatepetl crater will not interfere with the plans, it is said, as it is proposed to build the road and terminal on the side of the volcano facing Mexico City, while the sulphuric eruptions and smoke clouds that the mountain emits continually make their exit from its internal caldron from an opening on the east side of the mountain facing the city of Puebla, although the smoke spread above the peak is visible from Mexico City.

"Corn-Made" Tires From Kansas Seen if Prices Soar

Los Angeles, Cal.—Dr. James E. Norris, president of the American Chemical society in session here, sees in the cornfields of Kansas a possible solution of the disturbing situation recently created by skyrocketing rubber prices.

If continued high prices force tire manufacturers to appeal to the chemist, Doctor Norris said, it is entirely possible that a method of manufacturing synthetic rubber from corn and wheat derivatives may be developed and the rubber plantation supplanted in some measure at least by the middle western American farm. "It is among the possibilities that our research men will develop a valuable commercial rubber from acetone, from which the Germans made rubber during the war," he said.

"Acetone is a by-product of butyl alcohol, and butyl alcohol is produced from grain. In other words our automobile tires may yet be made from Kansas corn."

Doctor Norris pointed out that crude petroleum may be used as the base of synthetic rubber, in which case the corn and wheat growers of the Middle West will have to compete with the oil companies.

Finds Giant Redwood Tree, Sells Lumber for $5,250

Portland, Ore.—Finding a California redwood log is hardly less lucky than finding a gold mine. George Walker of Cannon Beach, Ore., has proved this to his own satisfaction. Walker recently dug up a redwood log which was partially buried by the sand of Cannon Beach. He worked two days with a team and scraper and then he began sawing it in lumber lengths. He estimates that he has taken $3,000 worth of lumber out of the log and has cut 30 circular dining-room table tops worth $75 each. A remarkable fact is that the log has lain in the same place for many years and no one realized its value. The log was eight feet through and 50 feet long. The rings showed that it was five hundred twenty-seven years old.

Naval Commander Almost Blinded in Lone Cruise

Challam Bay, Wash.—Commander Eustace B. Maude, R. N., retired, who departed from Mayne island, 30 miles north of Victoria, B. C., April 30 on a lone voyage to England in a 25-foot ketch, the Halfmoon, landed at La Push, an Indian village, 35 miles south of Cape Flattery, partly blind.

He was reported as far south as Santa Barbara, Cal., July 7 and was sighted from Destruction Island off the Washington coast, headed north, flying distress signals.

Commander Maude said that the constant glare of the sun's rays on the water blinded him so that he was unable to make observations or read his compass, which forced him to return home.

Forest Fires Cost

$38,000,000 in 1924

Washington. — There were nearly 92,000 forest fires in 1924, which swept 29,000,000 acres of public and private lands and did $38,000,000 damage exclusive of injury to young growth, watershed protection, wild life and recreation facilities.

The figures, gathered by forestry officials, are said to be accurate and to indicate how criminal is the carelessness of those responsible for much of the loss.

Many of the worst fires, it was reported, occurred in several of the southern states and in California.

CHILlicothe REFORMATORY NOW ASSURED

Washington, Sept. 22 (UP).—Erection of a department of justice reformatory at Chillicothe, Ohio, was practically assured today when the Veterans Bureau turned back 1,800 acres of Gamp Sherman land to the war department for re-allocation.

Officials said the land would be given to the justice department for a penal institution. The Veterans Bureau retained 3,000 acres and improvements in the federal hospital there are expected to be made.

Architects are now drawing plans for the new hospital buildings to replace temporary structures now at Chillicothe.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

Mrs. Henry P. Folsom will give a luncheon to Columbus and Chillicothe friends Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hedges, at their pretty country home north of Tarlton, delightfully entertained Sunday to a dinner party. Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ochs, Mr. and Mrs. Meinhard Palm, of Amanda; Mr. and Mrs. Arch Fox and daughter, Miss Golda, of Laurelville, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Pfeiffer and sons Alvin and Frank, and daughter, Ruth Marie, of Columbus.

The M. E. Sunday school class of Carroll, Ohio, known as the Merry Hustlers, with their husbands and children and well filled baskets met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Imler Sunday, September 20. A long table that groaned under the weight of the many good things to eat with chicken galore, including ice cream and cake, was spread on the lawn. The day was ideal. There were 72 present: Professor A. F. Cameron and children, of Circleville; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kiser, Mr. and Mrs. John Kiser and children, Mr. and Mrs. George Kester, Mrs. Effie McFarland and son, Miss Mayme Kester, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Calvert and son, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Crow, Mr. and Mrs. Harley Crow and son, Mr. and Mrs. Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Cruik, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Saylor, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Parish and son, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cooper and children, Mr. and Mrs. Frank McCleary and children, Mr. and Mrs. Russell McCleary and children, Miss Nell McCleary, Mr. and Mrs. Will Brandt, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Fisher and son, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fipps and children, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Schmit and children, Mrs. Charles Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Blackstone and children, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Imler and children Mrs. Imler was a former member of the class. All enjoyed a very good time.

A very delightful day was spent in and around Portsmouth by a party of thirty persons.

After motoring thru a very beautiful country by way of the Scioto Trail, the great structure of the C. & O. railroad bridge across the beautiful Ohio was visited, and in the shade of this structure a bountiful basket dinner was enjoyed.

After dinner the ferry crossing the river into New Portsmouth, Kentucky, was visited.

Those who enjoyed the trip were: Mr. and Mrs. John Burdett and children, of Chillicothe; Mr. and Mrs. Delbert de Bord, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Henkel, Mrs. Charley Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Elden Tewksbury and son, Everett, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Massie, Mr. and Mrs. Adam Henkel, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Tewksbury, Misses Viola Henkel and Ada de Bord, Messrs. Charles, William, Elmer and Edgar, Wilbert and Melvin de Bord and Gilbert Tewksbury, of Waverly and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Karshner and daughter, Mary, of Circleville.

Mrs. Karshner, in boosting the Circleville Pumpkin Show, displayed a nice, yellow cardboard pumpkin on the rear of the auto, and while feasting on the contents of the baskets, a Portsmouth cow which was pasturing near by, tested the quality of the Pickaway pumpkins. After eating about half of the fine pumpkin decided that she did not care for the Pickaway county product. Mrs. Karshner returned home without the pumpkin, hoping after the big show to be able to ship a load of real pumpkins to Portsmouth for the benefit of the cows of that vicinity.

Everybody reported a good time and decided to go again.

Interesting Reading

An old man, a real patriarch of the hills, wandered into the public library of a southern Indiana town, recently, and stood for a few minutes looking around. Finally approaching the librarian he said, rather defensively, "I reckon ye don't object to my readin' in that book there, do ye?" pointing with his cane in the direction of the dictionary.

Being assured that he was free to use the book, he seated himself comfortably, and seemingly, with much interest, perused the pages of the book for some time.—Indianapolis News.

Leaves $50 to Burglars, Gets Note of Thanks

New York.—Arthur Bohm, who lives from mid-April to mid-October at Grand View, N. Y., near Nyack, where his daughter has a real estate business, has on his return to his Brooklyn home every fall for seven years left a $50 bill on the middle of the living-room table with this note:

"I have taken all the valuables from this house. Only the furniture remains. Please accept this bank note for your trouble in breaking in. Please depart without doing any damage. Thank you. ARTHUR BOHM."

Mr. Bohm started the practice after a number of his neighbors' homes at Grand View had been pretty well wrecked by thieves looking for plunder during the winter months. Every spring until now he has gone back to Grand View to find his note with the $50 attached still on the table. But when he arrived in Grand View from Brooklyn with his wife and daughter the $50 was gone.

Across the face of the note was scrawled in lead pencil the word, "Thanks."

MISTAKE NOT TO "KEEP" BIRTHDAYS

Bond of Affection in Re- membering Anniversary.

"Do you still keep your birthday?" asked a woman of me the other day.

"Of course I do," I replied.

"I stopped that years ago," she told me.

"She could not have been thirty!"

When she had gone I began to wonder at what age a woman should cease to celebrate her birthday.

I pondered it over, writes Mrs. Nestor Noel in the New York Times, the more I came to the conclusion that she should keep it as long as she lives.

There are several reasons for this.

If she be the mother of a family the fact of her birthday being a day of celebration teaches unselfishness to the children.

For weeks beforehand they can plan for mother's birthday, working at home-made gifts in secret, asking themselves what she would like and being ready to give up little pleasures for her sake.

There are lonely women who have no children.

Wouldn't it be a great thing if some one in the village or street where they lived found out their birthdays and arranged with other people to give them joyous surprise?

Flowers can be given to the women who are well to do. Cakes and other practical things quickly suggest themselves when the woman is less well off.

Men do not care for these things so much. They forget their birthdays.

We know they often forget their wedding anniversaries.

This is a fact: Men do forget these things. Women, however, are different.

I think that even the modern woman clings more to the old traditions than a man, and even if she says nothing, yet in her heart there is an ache somewhere when her birthday has been forgotten.

I remember once going to see an old friend of mine. Business kept me from getting to her house until six o'clock.

She had a husband and nine children. When I came so late and presented my gift with my birthday wishes her eyes filled with tears as she looked at me gratefully.

"You are the only person who remembered my birthday," she said.

The gift I had taken her was of no importance. I have forgotten what it was.

She was quick to see and appreciate the thought behind the gift. She asked me to stay for tea. As she hastened to get it ready three of her children whispered together and then ran across to a store. Later they came back with a present from each.

"You see," I remarked, "your children have not forgotten you."

"They would never have thought of my birthday," she whispered, "if it hadn't been for you."

Then her mother-love made her make much of their gifts, but I wished that they had not needed to be reminded of their mother's birthday by a friend who, however dear, did not belong to the family.

We want our nearest and dearest to remember us first. Even grandmothers should celebrate their birthdays. It is so good for the rest of the family. It knits them together with a common bond of love.

I mean to keep my birthday as long as I live. Even if I should have seventy grandchildren and they should each present me with a pair of slippers. I would be thankful. Not that I should need all those slippers, but I would certainly need all the love that prompted the gifts.

Women always need love; they cannot live without it. Let them not be quick to say: "I never keep my birthday." When they allow people to forget their birthdays they lose the manifestation of a great deal of love.

Bad Bargain for Railroad

A young man's courtship is costing the Ludlow (Vt.) railroad $25.48 a week, according to engineers' estimates. It's like this: A youthful swain in Proctorsville is courting a young woman in Ludlow. He signals the express at Proctorsville to take him to Ludlow, paying a round trip fare of 36 cents. Returning to Proctorsville he signals another express train. The cost of stopping the two trains and starting them again costs about $4 each night, according to the engineers, so that though the railroad receives $2.52 a week from the young man in fares, it pays out $28 a week for stopping its express trains.

Parachutes Annoy Town

It is illegal to fall out of an airplane or balloon in Oakland, Cal., without a permit, even if the fall is made in a parachute. City commissioners recently passed an ordinance to that effect and one also requiring owners of balloons and planes that carry passengers to post a $20,000 bond to protect, not the passengers, but the lives and property of those who remain on the ground.

The ordinance was made necessary, according to city officials, because five parachute jumpers fell heavily recently, all on one day. One crashed on a roof and the other four landed in expensive flower beds and shrubbery.

Bible Distribution

Eighteen thousand copies of the Bible have been distributed in the orphanages of the Near East relief during the past two years, according to a report from the overseas directors of that organization. The Bibles, printed in eight languages, were secured through the co-operation of the American and British Bible societies, the Greek and Armenian churches, and various co-operating religious bodies.

One Detail Was Missing

On the historic afternoon when Jack Johnson fought Jim Jeffries in Nevada for the world's championship there was a baseball game at the old Polo grounds. In the press stand, among others, sat Sid Mercer, the sporting writer, and Franklin P. Adams, the column conductor. For some reason or other, ringside bulletins were not being received at the ball park. Naturally, the crowd wanted to know how the fight was going.

Several hundred spectators, drawn by the fact that telegraph instruments were clicking in the press stand, packed themselves solidly behind the wire netting in the hope of hearing tidings from Reno over the wire. Mercer and Adams got a joint inspiration. They pretended to be taking a ringside description off one of the instruments. First one would chant off a purely imaginary account of a round, and then the other would.

Now it so happened that Adams had a bet down on the negro to win, and accordingly favored the black contender. In his turn to "read" a round, he would depict Johnson as hammering Jeffries into a pulp. But Mercer, who was a partisan of Jeffries, would each time retaliate with a spirited but, of course, purely fictitious account of how the white man, having rallied heroically, was now dealing mighty blows upon the head and body of the tottering, weakening black.

Naturally, the listening crowd was torn by conflicting emotions. Cheers and groans marked the utterances of the two gifted romancers. Eventually, when the multitude had grown so in numbers that the pressure of its bulk threatened to break down the netting, the conspirators decided it was time to bring their joke to a climax.

Mercer, cocking his head above an instrument as though the better to hear, began reciting, somewhat after this fashion:

"Round-seven! At the sound of the bell the two men leap to the center of the ring! They exchange a whirlwind of jabs and upper-cuts! The fighting is the fiercest ever seen in a heavy-weight contest! Suddenly the knockout blow is delivered upon the point of the jaw! The defeated man drops like a log! His seconds drag his unconscious form into his corner! The mad-dened-throng acclaims the winner and pandemonium reigns supreme!"

Here he paused and, with the air of one who has completed a hard job, made as though to sit down.

From a thousand throats behind him one question arose in a mighty chorus:

"Who wins?"

Dramatically Mercer raised his hand for silence, and a deep hush befell.

"The dispatches did not state," he said, simply, and sat down again.

Combating the Yellow Peril

Every time the government takes a census this story is revived, which means it enjoys a rejuvenated popularity at intervals of exactly ten years. When I catch myself laughing at it, I know that another decade has slipped by me unawares.

The story has to do with the enumerator who called at a humble home in the outskirts of Cincinnati, and there found the head of the family humped up over a large volume. It developed, in the course of the conversation, that the householder some months before had been induced by a traveling agent to invest in an encyclopedia, and that to get the worth of his money he had been reading the books of the set pretty constantly ever since. He was now full of facts, statistics and data.

In reply to the caller's questions he gave his name and age and his wife's name and age.

"How many infant children have you?" asked the census taker.

"I've got three," said the citizen.

"And that's all there ever will be, too, you take it from me."

"What makes you so positive about that?" asked the visitor.

"I'll tell you why there won't never be but three," said the man. "It's wrote down in this here book that every fourth child born in the world is Chinese."

The Identical Article

A Shakespearean actor was left stranded in a small town in Michigan. This was in the days when there still were Shakespearean actors.

He obtained board at the local hotel until a remittance arrived to take him back to Chicago. As he had no funds for tipping purposes he got scant attention from the servants.

One day he pushed and pushed the push button in his room without getting an answer. Then he got out of bed, put on his trousers and overcoat, turned the coat collar up about his bare throat and ventured through the hallway until he came to the round opening down upon the office floor.

"Bellboy! Bellboy!" he called in his best speaking voice.

"Watcher want?" answered back a youthful menial impertinently.

"Bellboy," said the Thespian with much dignity, "I desire my laundry to be brought to me forthwith."

"Gwan!" said the boy. "You didn't have but half a shirt when you hit this town."

"That," said the actor, "is the laundry to which I refer."

TRADE SACRED RELICS FOR TICKET TO MOVIES

Children of Guam Are Keen for Wild
West Dramas and Bathing
Girl Pictures.

Honolulu.—An ancient sacred relic in exchange for a ticket to the movies is the latest tale to float up from the mysterious islands of the South seas, where a group of scientists is attempting to solve the problem of the origin of the Polynesian race.

It is told in a letter from one of the workers attached to the Bishop museum, Honolulu, and concerns Guam and the Chamorro children on the sun-baked shores of that island who will hunt assiduously for bits of weathered stone in order to enjoy viewing the cowboys, train wrecks, shooting scrapes and bathing girls that appear on the Guam screen as representing that far-away and unknown country, America.

The search is "hazardous" for the children because of the tradition that the strangely shaped stones which are in such great demand at the Agana "movie-house" belonged once to the "Taotao-Mona," or the "people of before time," who are feared so greatly that none of the adult residents dare touch the relics.

The stones are the implements and weapons left by the former inhabitants of the Maritimes, who may have belonged to a race antedating the Polynesians, the scientists say.

Many varieties of the objects are necessary for the study of the habits and customs of the race, and the Bishop museum expedition has contracted with the Agana motion-picture theater in one of the strangest compacts ever signed.

Its terms provide for an exchange of the relics for free admission to the show, the museum to redeem the stones, most of which have come from "tabu" or forbidden spots. They will be studied carefully and perhaps in them will be found the clue that will lead to the origin of the Polynesian peoples.

Setting Eggs 50-50 on Sex, Experiments Prove

Washington.—The Department of Agriculture, under the direction of Secretary Jardine, has announced you cannot bet on the sex of a chicken within by the length, shape or weight of an egg.

Scientists, however, it was explained, are able to tell the sex of the chicken in the shell after seven or eight days of incubation.

The investigation just concluded by Dr. M. A. Jull, poultry husbandman, has proved beyond a doubt that there is nothing in the contention that the long, slim, heavy eggs produce roosters and the small and shorter ones pullets.

"It has been determined, however," says Doctor Jull, "that the greater number of eggs a hen lays before being put into the breeding pen, the larger will be the proportion of females and the smaller the proportion of males."

PLAN SANITARIUM ON MOUNT POPOCATEPETL

Will Be Erected at Altitude of 17,843 Feet.

Mexico City.—At an altitude of 17,843 feet, near the snow-covered peak of the volcano Mount Popocatepetl, practical use is to be made of the romantic lure of the "mountain that smokes," as Popocatepetl is referred to frequently.

The ministry of public works makes the announcement that an offer has been received from British capitalists for the construction of a sanatorium above the snow line of the mountain to be used by tubercular patients.

The plan includes the building of an extraordinarily complicated aerial railway for the ascent of the mountain. Part of this line is to be an ordinary funicular or cog incline railway. This is to reach as high as the grades up the mountain's side will permit. From there on an aerial line, cars to be run on a cable, much like elevators dropped into mine shafts, will make the further ascent possible.

The investment is to reach $500,000.

The Popocatepetl crater will not interfere with the plans, it is said, as it is proposed to build the road and terminal on the side of the volcano facing Mexico City, while the sulphuric eruptions and smoke clouds that the mountain emits continually make their exit from its internal caldron from an opening on the east side of the mountain facing the city of Puebla, although the smoke spread above the peak is visible from Mexico City.

"Corn-Made" Tires From Kansas Seen if Prices Soar

Los Angeles, Cal.—Dr. James E. Norris, president of the American Chemical society in session here, sees in the cornfields of Kansas a possible solution of the disturbing situation recently created by skyrocketing rubber prices.

If continued high prices force tire manufacturers to appeal to the chemist, Doctor Norris said, it is entirely possible that a method of manufacturing synthetic rubber from corn and wheat derivatives may be developed and the rubber plantation supplanted in some measure at least by the middle western American farm. "It is among the possibilities that our research men will develop a valuable commercial rubber from acetone, from which the Germans made rubber during the war," he said.

"Acetone is a by-product of butyl alcohol, and butyl alcohol is produced from grain. In other words our automobile tires may yet be made from Kansas corn."

Doctor Norris pointed out that crude petroleum may be used as the base of synthetic rubber, in which case the corn and wheat growers of the Middle West will have to compete with the oil companies.

Finds Giant Redwood Tree, Sells Lumber for $5,250

Portland, Ore.—Finding a California redwood log is hardly less lucky than finding a gold mine. George Walker of Cannon Beach, Ore., has proved this to his own satisfaction. Walker recently dug up a redwood log which was partially buried by the sand of Cannon Beach. He worked two days with a team and scraper and then he began sawing it in lumber lengths. He estimates that he has taken $3,000 worth of lumber out of the log and has cut 30 circular dining-room table tops worth $75 each. A remarkable fact is that the log has lain in the same place for many years and no one realized its value. The log was eight feet through and 50 feet long. The rings showed that it was five hundred twenty-seven years old.

Naval Commander Almost Blinded in Lone Cruise

Clallam Bay, Wash.—Commander Eustace B. Maude, R. N., retired, who departed from Mayne Island, 30 miles north of Victoria, B. C., April 30 on a lone voyage to England in a 25-foot ketch, the Halfmoon, landed at La Push, an Indian village, 35 miles south of Cape Flattery, partly blind.

He was reported as far south as Santa Barbara, Cal., July 7 and was sighted from Destruction Island off the Washington coast, headed north, flying distress signals.

Commander Maude said that the constant glare of the sun's rays on the water blinded him so that he was unable to make observations or read his compass, which forced him to return home.

Forest Fires Cost
$38,000,000 in 1924

Washington. — There were nearly 92,000 forest fires in 1924, which swept 29,000,000 acres of public and private lands and did $38,000,000 damage exclusive of injury to young growth, watershed protection, wild life and recreation facilities.

The figures, gathered by forestry officials, are said to be accurate and to indicate how criminal is the carelessness of those responsible for much of the loss.

Many of the worst fires, it was reported, occurred in several of the southern states and in California.

CHILLICOTHE REFORMATORY
NOW ASSURED

Washington, Sept. 22 (UP).—Erection of a department of justice reformatory at Chillicothe, Ohio, was practically assured today when the Veterans Bureau turned back 1,800 acres of Camp Sherman land to the war department for re-allocation.

Officials said the land would be given to the justice department for a penal institution. The Veterans Bureau retained 3,000 acres and improvements in the federal hospital there are expected to be made.

Architects are now drawing plans for the new hospital buildings to replace temporary structures now at Chillicothe.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

Mrs. Henry P. Folsom will give a luncheon to Columbus and Chillicothe friends Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hedges, at their pretty country home north of Tarlton, delightfully entertained Sunday to a dinner party. Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ochs, Mr. and Mrs. Meinhard Palm, of Amanda; Mr. and Mrs. Arch Fox and daughter, Miss Golda, of Laurelville, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Pfeiffer and sons Alvin and Frank, and daughter, Ruth Marie, of Columbus.

The M. E. Sunday school class of Carroll, Ohio, known as the Merry Hustlers, with their husbands and children and well filled baskets met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Immler Sunday, September 20. A long table that groaned under the weight of the many good things to eat with chicken galore, including ice cream and cake, was spread on the lawn. The day was ideal. There were 72 present: Professor A. F. Cameron and children, of Circleville; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kistler, Mr. and Mrs. John Kistler and children, Mr. and Mrs. George Kester, Mrs. Effie McFarland and son, Miss Mayme Kester, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Calvert and son, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Crow, Mr. and Mrs. Harley Crow and son, Mr. and Mrs. Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Cruik, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Saylor, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Parish and son, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cooper and children, Mr. and Mrs. Frank McCleary and children, Mr. and Mrs. Russell McCleary and children, Miss Nell McCleary, Mr. and Mrs. Will Brandt, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Fisher and son, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fipps and children, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Schmit and children, Mrs. Charles Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Blackstone and children, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Immler and children. Mrs. Immler was a former member of the class. All enjoyed a very good time.

A very delightful day was spent in and around Portsmouth by a party of thirty persons.

After motoring thru a very beautiful country by way of the Scioto Trail, the great structure of the C. & O. railroad bridge across the beautiful Ohio was visited, and in the shade of this structure a bountiful basket dinner was enjoyed.

After dinner the ferry crossing the river into New Portsmouth, Kentucky, was visited.

Those who enjoyed the trip were: Mr. and Mrs. John Burdett and children, of Chillicothe; Mr. and Mrs. Delbert de Bord, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Henkel, Mrs. Charley Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Elden Tewksbury and son, Everett, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Massie, Mr. and Mrs. Adam Henkel, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Tewksbury, Misses Viola Henkel and Ada de Bord, Messrs. Charles, William, Elmer and Edgar, Wilbert and Melvin de Bord and Gilbert Tewksbury, of Waverly and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Karshner and daughter, Mary, of Circleville.

Mrs. Karshner, in boosting the Circleville Pumpkin Show, displayed a nice, yellow cardboard pumpkin on the rear of the auto, and while feasting on the contents of the baskets, a Portsmouth cow which was pasturing near by, tested the quality of the Pickaway pumpkins. After eating about half of the fine pumpkin decided that she did not care for the Pickaway county product. Mrs. Karshner returned home without the pumpkin, hoping after the big show to be able to ship a load of real pumpkins to Portsmouth for the benefit of the cows of that vicinity.

Everybody reported a good time and decided to go again.

Interesting Reading

An old man, a real patriarch of the hills, wandered into the public library of a southern Indiana town, recently, and stood for a few minutes looking around. Finally approaching the librarian he said, rather defensively, "I reckon ye don't object to my readin' in that book there, do ye?" pointing with his cane in the direction of the dictionary.

Being assured that he was free to use the book, he seated himself comfortably, and seemingly, with much interest, perused the pages of the book for some time.—Indianapolis News.

PHONOGRAPH RECORDS

Leaves $50 to Burglars,
Gets Note of Thanks

New York.—Arthur Bohm, who lives from mid-April to mid-October at Grand View, N. Y., near Nyack, where his daughter has a real estate business, has on his return to his Brooklyn home every fall for seven years left a $50 bill on the middle of the living-room table with this note:

"I have taken all the valuables from this house. Only the furniture remains. Please accept this bank note for your trouble in breaking in. Please depart without doing any damage. Thank you.

ARTHUR BOHM."

Mr. Bohm started the practice after a number of his neighbors' homes at Grand View had been pretty well wrecked by thieves looking for plunder during the winter months.

Every spring until now he has gone back to Grand View to find his note with the $50 attached still on the table. But when he arrived in Grand View from Brooklyn with his wife and daughter the $50 was gone.

Across the face of the note was scrawled in lead pencil the word, "Thanks."

MISTAKE NOT TO "KEEP" BIRTHDAYS

Bond of Affection in Remembering Anniversary.

"Do you still keep your birthday?" asked a woman of me the other day.

"Of course I do," I replied.

"I stopped that years ago," she told me. She could not have been thirty!

When she had gone I began to wonder at what age a woman should cease to celebrate her birthday. The more I pondered it over, writes Mrs. Nestor Noel in the New York Times, the more I came to the conclusion that she should keep it as long as she lives.

There are several reasons for this. If she be the mother of a family the fact of her birthday being a day of celebration teaches unselfishness to the children. For weeks beforehand they can plan for mother's birthday, working at home-made gifts in secret, asking themselves what she would like and being ready to give up little pleasures for her sake.

There are lonely women who have no children. Wouldn't it be a great thing if some one in the village or street where they lived found out their birthdays and arranged with other people to give them joyous surprise? Flowers can be given to the women who are well to do. Cakes and other practical things quickly suggest themselves when the woman is less well off.

Men do not care for these things so much. They forget their birthdays. We know they often forget their wedding anniversaries.

This is a fact: Men do forget these things. Women, however, are different. I think that even the modern woman clings more to the old traditions than a man, and even if she says nothing, yet in her heart there is an ache somewhere when her birthday has been forgotten.

I remember once going to see an old friend of mine. Business kept me from getting to her house until six o'clock. She had a husband and nine children. When I came so late and presented my gift with my birthday wishes her eyes filled with tears as she looked at me gratefully.

"You are the only person who remembered my birthday," she said.

The gift I had taken her was of no importance. I have forgotten what it was. She was quick to see and appreciate the thought behind the gift. She asked me to stay for tea. As she hastened to get it ready three of her children whispered together and then ran across to a store. Later they came back with a present from each.

"You see," I remarked, "your children have not forgotten you."

"They would never have thought of my birthday," she whispered, "if it hadn't been for you." Then her mother-love made her make much of their gifts, but I wished that they had not needed to be reminded of their mother's birthday by a friend who, however dear, did not belong to the family.

We want our nearest and dearest to remember us first. Even grandmothers should celebrate their birthdays. It is so good for the rest of the family. It knits them together with a common bond of love.

I mean to keep my birthday as long as I live. Even if I should have seventy grandchildren and they should each present me with a pair of slippers. I would be thankful. Not that I should need all those slippers, but I would certainly need all the love that prompted the gifts.

Women always need love; they cannot live without it. Let them not be quick to say: "I never keep my birthday." When they allow people to forget their birthdays they lose the manifestation of a great deal of love.

Bad Bargain for Railroad

A young man's courtship is costing the Ludlow (Vt.) railroad $25.48 a week, according to engineers' estimates. It's like this: A youthful swain in Proctorsville is courting a young woman in Ludlow. He signals the express at Proctorsville to take him to Ludlow, paying a round trip fare of 36 cents. Returning to Proctorsville he signals another express train. The cost of stopping the two trains and starting them again costs about $4 each night, according to the engineers, so that though the railroad receives $2.52 a week from the young man in fares, it pays out $28 a week for stopping its express trains.

Parachutes Annoy Town

It is illegal to fall out of an airplane or balloon in Oakland, Cal., without a permit, even if the fall is made in a parachute. City commissioners recently passed an ordinance to that effect and one also requiring owners of balloons and planes that carry passengers to post a $20,000 bond to protect, not the passengers, but the lives and property of those who remain on the ground.

The ordinance was made necessary, according to city officials, because five parachute jumpers fell heavily recently, all on one day. One crashed on a roof and the other four landed in expensive flower beds and shrubbery.

Bible Distribution

Eighteen thousand copies of the Bible have been distributed in the orphanages of the Near East relief during the past two years, according to a report from the overseas directors of that organization. The Bibles, printed in eight languages, were secured through the co-operation of the American and British Bible societies, the Greek and Armenian churches, and various co-operating religious bodies.

One Detail Was Missing

On the historic afternoon when Jack Johnson fought Jim Jeffries in Nevada for the world's championship there was a baseball game at the old Polo grounds. In the press stand, among others, sat Sid Mercer, the sporting writer, and Franklin P. Adams, the column conductor. For some reason or other, ringside bulletins were not being received at the ball park. Naturally, the crowd wanted to know how the fight was going.

Several hundred spectators, drawn by the fact that telegraph instruments were clicking in the press stand, packed themselves solidly behind the wire netting in the hope of hearing tidings from Reno over the wire. Mercer and Adams got a joint inspiration. They pretended to be taking a ringside description of one of the instruments. First one would chant off a purely imaginary account of a round, and then the other would.

Now it so happened that Adams had a bet down on the negro to win, and accordingly favored the black contender. In his turn to "read" a round, he would depict Johnson as hammering Jeffries into a pulp. But Mercer, who was a partisan of Jeffries, would each time retort with a spirited but, of course, purely fictitious account of how the white man, having rallied heroically, was now dealing mighty blows upon the head and body of the tottering, weakening black.

Naturally, the listening crowd was torn by conflicting emotions. Cheers and groans marked the utterances of the two gifted romancers. Eventually, when the multitude had grown so in numbers that the pressure of its bulk threatened to break down the netting, the conspirators decided it was time to bring their joke to a climax.

Mercer, cocking his head above an instrument as though the better to hear, began reciting, somewhat after this fashion:

"Round-seven! At-the-sound-of-the-bell-the-two-men-leap-to-the-center-of-the-ring! They-exchange-a-whirlwind-of-jabs-and-upper-cuts! The-fighting-is-the-fiercest-ever-seen-in-a-heavy-weight-contest! Suddenly-the-knock-out-blow-is-delivered-upon-the-point-of-the-jaw! The-defeated-man-drops-like-a-log! His-seconds-drag-his-unconscious-form-into-his-corner! The-maddened-throng-acclaims-the-winner-and-pandemonium-reigns-supreme!"

Here he paused and, with the air of one who has completed a hard job, made as though to sit down.

From a thousand throats behind him one question arose in a mighty chorus: "Who wins?"

Dramatically Mercer raised his hand for silence, and a deep hush befell.

"The dispatches did not state," he said, simply, and sat down again.

Combating the Yellow Peril

Every time the government takes a census this story is revived, which means it enjoys a rejuvenated popularity at intervals of exactly ten years. When I catch myself laughing at it, I know that another decade has slipped by me unawares.

The story has to do with the enumerator who called at a humble home in the outskirts of Cincinnati, and there found the head of the family humped up over a large volume. It developed, in the course of the conversation, that the householder some months before had been induced by a traveling agent to invest in an encyclopedia, and that to get the worth of his money he had been reading the books of the set pretty constantly ever since. He was now full of facts, statistics and data.

In reply to the caller's questions he gave his name and age and his wife's name and age.

"How many infant children have you?" asked the census taker.

"I've got three," said the citizen. "And that's all there ever will be, too, you take it from me."

"What makes you so positive about that?" asked the visitor.

"I'll tell you why I were won't never be but three," said the man. "It's wrote down in this here book that every fourth child born in the world is Chinese."

The Identical Article

A Shakespearean actor was left stranded in a small town in Michigan. This was in the days when there still were Shakespearean actors.

He obtained board at the local hotel until a remittance arrived to take him back to Chicago. As he had no funds for tipping purposes he got scant attention from the servants.

One day he pushed and pushed the push button in his room without getting an answer. Then he got out of bed, put on his trousers and overcoat, turned the coat collar up about his bare throat and ventured through the hallway until he came to the rotunda opening down upon the office floor.

"Bellboy! Bellboy!" he called in his best speaking voice.

"Watcher want?" answered back a youthful mental impertinently.

"Bellboy," said the Thespian with much dignity, "I desire my laundry to be brought to me forthwith!"

"G'wan!" said the boy. "You didn't have but half a shirt when you hit this town."

"That," said the actor, "is the laundry to which I refer."

TRADE SACRED RELICS
FOR TICKET TO MOVIES

Children of Guam Are Keen for Wild
West Dramas and Bathing
Girl Pictures.

Honolulu.—An ancient sacred relic in exchange for a ticket to the movies is the latest tale to float up from the mysterious islands of the South seas, where a group of scientists is attempting to solve the problem of the origin of the Polynesian race.

It is told in a letter from one of the workers attached to the Bishop museum, Honolulu, and concerns Guam and the Chamorro children on the sun-baked shores of that island who will hunt assiduously for bits of weathered stone in order to enjoy viewing the cowboys, train wrecks, shooting scrapes and bathing girls that appear on the Guam screen as representing that far-away and unknown country, America.

The search is "hazardous" for the children because of the tradition that the strangely shaped stones which are in such great demand at the Agana "movie-house" belonged once to the "Taotao-Mona," or the "people of before time," who are feared so greatly that none of the adult residents dare touch the relics.

The stones are the implements and weapons left by the former inhabitants of the Marianas, who may have belonged to a race antedating the Polynesians, the scientists say.

Many varieties of the objects are necessary for the study of the habits and customs of the race, and the Bishop museum expedition has contracted with the Agana motion-picture theater in one of the strangest compacts ever signed.

Its terms provide for an exchange of the relics for free admission to the show, the museum to redeem the stones, most of which have come from "tabu" or forbidden spots. They will be studied carefully and perhaps in them will be found the clue that will lead to the origin of the Polynesian peoples.

Setting Eggs 50-50 on
Sex, Experiments Prove

Washington.—The Department of Agriculture, under the direction of Secretary Jardine, has announced you cannot bet on the sex of a chicken within by the length, shape or weight of an egg.

Scientists, however, it was explained, are able to tell the sex of the chicken in the shell after seven or eight days of incubation.

The investigation just concluded by Dr. M. A. Jull, poultry husbandman, has proved beyond a doubt that there is nothing in the contention that the long, slim, heavy eggs produce roosters and the small and shorter ones pullets.

"It has been determined, however," says Doctor Jull, "that the greater number of eggs a hen lays before being put into the breeding pen, the larger will be the proportion of females and the smaller the proportion of males produced by the eggs."

SURELY "THE FRESHMAN" IS HAROLD LLOYD'S BEST.

Look at it any way you wish, you'll have to admit after you have seen Harold Lloyd's newest comedy, "The Freshman," now showing at the Metropolitan Theatre, that this world-renowned star has hit the top of the comedy field. Ever since "The Freshman" opened here, the audiences have been kept in a continual uproar. If this is not the funniest picture Lloyd has ever made, then this reviewer's funny bone is not working.

"The Freshman" tells the story of a young chap who goes to college and seeks recognition as the

AMUSEMENTS

Harold Lloyd is certainly entitled to feel proud over his accomplishment of "The Freshman," which sent audiences at the Met theater yesterday out onto the street limp with laughing. The laughs start gently at first and work up so gradually and evenly that you don't realize what is happening to you until you find yourself sobbing, "Oh! Oh!" for more breath! Too hearty laughter is a joyous sort of agony no one resents.

The freshman, Harold Lamb, enters college with queer notions as to how a student should act to become the most popular chap to the campus. One of his ideas, gleaned from a movie is that one should do a fancy jig step every time he is introduced to anyone. This jig, and the fact that he tells every new acquaintance that he's just a regular fellow and they should straighten up and call him "Speedy," attracts the immediate attention of the school's chief joker, and after that, poor Harold has no rest.

In the hope of popularity he does everything he is told to do. He attempts to make the football team, and is made water boy. He gives a big dance and is forced to attend in a suit that is only basted together. He makes a speech to the entire student body assembled to hear the dean's address. And he becomes the world's greatest single retail buyer of ice cream cones. Finally, however, he gets into a football game and this scrimmage brings "The Freshman" to a finish that is as exciting and thrilling as it is funny.

Everyone in the cast is excellent, and the college boys and co-eds look like the real thing—the best looking bunch of live wire youngsters you ever saw away from a campus. All hail to "The Freshman!" Let no one pass him by unseen!

Knew His Wife

Jones was a chemist, and when his wife ran away with another man he inserted the following advertisement in the local paper: "This is to notify the party who so kindly relieved me of my wife that I can supply him with liniments, bandages, amica, healing salves, absorbent cotton, iodine, sleeping powders, and crutches at rock bottom prices."—London Tit-Bits.

Wild Parsnip Most Dangerous Plant

It Is Umbelliferous and Grows in Damp Meadows.

The most poisonous plant that grows in the United States is without doubt the cicuta, commonly known as "wild parsnip," or "water hemlock."
Cicuta is an umbelliferous plant and looks somewhat like the common garden parsnip. It grows mostly in damp meadows and along ditch banks. It does not have a tap root like the garden parsnip, but all of the different species grow from a root stalk to which are attached roots, which may be small or form a group of thick, fleshy fibers. The matured tops and seeds found in hay cause no trouble,
but the root-stalk and roots are violently poisonous. A part of one small root is sufficient to kill a horse. Most every summer we hear of people being fatally poisoned from tasting the root of "wild parsnip."
The young leaves in the early spring
are also poisonous, especially for cattle. The symptoms are frothing at the mouth and violent convulsions.
When people are poisoned, if the stomach is quickly emptied by an emetic recovery usually takes place,
but as horses and cattle are unable to empty the stomach, this remedy
cannot be applied. Only the mildest cases of poisoning recover; the severe cases are hopeless. Every farmer and stockman should be able to identify our principal poisonous plants. Suspicious plants should be sent to the agricultural college for identification.
—George H. Glover, Colorado Agricultural college.

Rabbit Pelts Becoming of Much Value for Fur

The rabbit is one of the best animals to raise on a small scale or for the man that has a little time morning
and evening to devote to something to give relief from business and also is a fine thing for the small rancher who has his own alfalfa or clover hay as rabbit pelts are becoming of more value and are being keenly sought after.
The New Zealand Red, New Zealand White and American Blue fill the bill as all-around utility rabbits. The Blue and White hides bring the top
price, the Reds being a close second.
One writer says the Flemish is a very fast grower, after two months of age being far in advance of the smaller breeds.

Mower Wheel Makes Good as Cultivator in Corn

The problem that confronts the farmer after plowing the corn the last time, as to the manner in which he will control the moisture and kill the weeds, is no small one. The corn is too high to be plowed with a cultivator, and then, too, the farmer wishes
to leave the ground as level as possible. Both of these problems may be easily controlled by dragging an old mower-machine wheel between the rows. This serves the purpose very well. It will help in controlling the moisture; make the ground easy to till in the spring or fall, by leaving it level and free from ridges, and will control effectively the young, tender weeds if done before the weeds get a strong growth.

Supplements Needed as Pastures Begin to Dry

Soiling crops or corn silage are recommended as supplements for drought damaged pastures used for dairy herds. If the dairyman lacks corn silage and is not in position to feed a soiling crop, he should give his cows a grain ration, says O. G. Schaefer of the University farm, Minnesota university. For average or low producing cows
on pastures badly burned the grain ration should consist of equal parts of corn and oats or equal parts of barley
and oats. For cows of more than average production one pound of oil-meal should be added to the ration for every five or six pounds of the corn
and oats or barley and oats. Where no pasture is left at all the cows should be fed about as in winter.

Farm Hint

Name your farm and adopt a trade mark for your goods.
Destruction of volunteer wheat
means less injury from Hessian fly.
Heavy feeding and no exercise on Sunday is equally bad for horses and men.
The farmer with several sources of income is the one who is reaping the
largest profits.
A poultry house is a good investment if it protects the flock. In order to lay, the hens must be comfortable.
Sharp knives at all times help greatly to make fine silage and much time
is saved by having an emery wheel attachment with the rig.
Most farmers think late afternoon
is the best time to cut alfalfa. The hay is apt to look better for it, and more of the leaves will stay on.
To keep mice and rats from chewing harness, place a little salt on the tail ties close by the harness as they chew the leather to get salt.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide
(1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
(2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
(3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.
This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.
Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

E. ROBINSON
SHOOTS HIMSELF
THROUGH HEAD

Ill Health Since Death of His Mother Is Cause Attributed—32 Caliber Revolver Used By Unfortunate Man—Found In Garage In Rear of Father's Home Early Monday Morning.

In ill health for a year, since the death of his mother, Ellwyn Robinson, sign painter, married, committed suicide by shooting himself through the brain, presumably about midnight, Sunday. He was found by members of his family, Monday morning, about 5 o'clock, in the garage to the rear of the Andrew Robinson home, 202 Church street.

The unfortunate man had used a 32 caliber revolver which was found in his hand. The bullet entered the head above and behind the right ear. Death was almost instantaneous. No note was left explaining the rash deed, but members of the family stated Monday that he had been in ill health for about a year.

Coroner Everett Robbins was called about 6:45 a. m. and after a thorough investigation pronounced the death a case of suicide. The man had been dead about four or five hours, it was estimated by the coroner.

Robinson's work as a sign painter took him over a large part of Ohio in this section where he numbered his friends by the score. The news of his death Monday morning came as a distinct shock to all.

In the passing of "Roby" as he was familiarly known, his friends suffer a distinct loss.

Ellwyn W. Robinson was born in August, 1887, in South Union township, the son of Andrew Robinson and his wife Jennie Clark Robinson. The greater part of his life had been spent in Chillicothe where he was a member of the Elks, Masons and the Shriners. During the World War he was a member of the Eighty-third Division. He leaves to mourn their loss his father, his wife, Marie (Caldwell) Robinson, one son Clark Lee Robinson, two brothers, John Drew Robinson and Clark W. Robinson, all of this city.

The funeral arrangements will be announced later.—Chillicothe News-Advertiser.

Protection for Shoes

The copper-toed shoes of sixty years ago were invented by a Maine farmer who found they lasted longer than three ordinary pairs.

BACK TO NATURE
MOVE MEANS JAIL

Thought He Was Promenading South Sea Island.

Chicago.—Clothes make the man, sure enough, but then again there are times when the lack of clothes makes a man's undoing.

At least so it was early in the morning when William Rosnow, thirty-four, of 648 West Madison street, believing he was promenading the shores of a South Sea island, took a little walk, minus a few of his clothes, and finally landed in a restaurant at 10 South Canal street with nothing on but a very attractive mustache and a shirt that had shrunk just a little bit in the wash.

"I knew I shouldn't have had that last drink," groaned one of the night owls, as he fell off a quick lunch stool. "Where did you get that shirt?" chanted away a song composer who started stirring mustard into his coffee in his excitement.

And Policeman William Granger reached for his gun. As he did Rosnow, who, rumor has it, was just a little bit under the influence of liquor, a strip poker game and jealousy of women's abbreviated styles, reached for his shirt.

Officer Granger, realizing the seriousness of the situation and fearing that a shot might strip Rosnow of still more of his shirt, brought a little football into play and made a flying tackle.

A few minutes later Rosnow and Granger arrived in the Desplaines street police station, the policeman leading his prisoner by the mustache. "Couldn't even keep his shirt on him," groaned the officer.

KEEPING WELL

EPIDEMIC HICCUP

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

EVERYBODY, at some time or other, has had hiccups. Generally, these annoying spasms are caused by over-eating or overdrinking, the presence of gas in the stomach, nervousness or excitement. Evidently, they are as old as the human race. In the days of Plato, the Greek philosopher, Eryximachos, an Athenian physician, told a friend of his who was attacked with hiccup at a banquet to hold his breath, to gargle his throat or to tickle his nose with a feather. About the same kind of advice that the victim of today gets from his friends.

But sometimes the hiccups don't stop. Every few days the newspapers contain accounts of someone who has had hiccups for days and who cannot stop. Stranger still are epidemics of hiccups. Such an epidemic occurred in Winnipeg in 1919, when over a thousand cases were reported.

Hiccup, of course, is not a disease. It is merely a spasm of the diaphragm, the muscular partition between the chest cavity and the abdominal cavity. This spasm may be slight and temporary or it may be the symptom of some serious disease. It is common in some nervous disorders or it may occur in the last stages of some diseases. But for hiccup to occur among hundreds of people at once is most unusual.

The three Winnipeg epidemics all began in November, reached their height by the first of December and disappeared by the first of January. All ages were affected from a child of ten to an old man of eighty-seven. Strange to say, over 90 per cent were males.

No definite cause could be found. But each epidemic was closely connected with an epidemic of influenza.

Influenza is a strange disease. When it came to this country in 1850, it was called the epizootic. After running all over the country like wild fire, it became milder and less frequent and finally died out entirely. For many years, no one ever heard of it. Then in 1889-1890 it suddenly appeared as la grippe.

Strangely enough, this disease never seems the same. Some years most of the afflicted have all the symptoms of a bad cold. Another year it will resemble bronchitis or pneumonia. Then it will be marked by nausea and vomiting or so-called "stomach flu," while again it will seem to spend its energies on the intestinal tract. It has been noticed that, at some times and places, its effects are largely on the brain and nerves. Most cases of so-called sleeping sickness are due to influenza infection. It is this form which is most frequently accompanied by hiccup. None of the cases in Winnipeg was fatal, although several died of sleeping sickness. Altogether a strange and mysterious sickness.

Old Law on "Indecent Music" Puzzles Capital

Washington.—The Washington police have found still another "don't" in the official records, and are preparing to enforce it if they can agree on what it prohibits.

From a musty file of police regulations someone unearthed one forbidding "indecent music." Evidently "indecent" music without words is meant, and some authorities say there's no such thing while those who take the contrary view are far apart in defining a standard of decency.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Hart held words are wholly unnecessary to make music indecent.

"You know what I mean," he said, "that hootchy-kootchy sort of intonation."

Mrs. Mina Van Winkle, head of the policewomen, had an entirely different definition.

"I refer," she said, "to that tom-tommy sort of oriental music that makes men forget home and babies. The desert natives play that sort for dancing, but they have self-respect enough to dance by themselves. They would be shocked to see the way our boys and girls hug each other and vibrate to the tune of those compelling pieces."

Sergeant Phillips, the police psychopathic expert, inclines to the belief that while there is a lot of "crazy" music, it would be difficult to prove that any of it is "indecent."

Dying, Wants Pets Killed to Join Her in Heaven

New York.—Mme. Kitty Berger, harpist, who died of heart disease in the Presbyterian hospital, left word that her four cats should be killed at once so they might go to heaven with her, her friend, Mrs. Adolph Schminke, said. Mrs. Schminke said she gave the cats to the American Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, to be killed.

Mrs. Schminke added that when Mademoiselle Berger was told, two years ago, to go to the hospital for treatment, she refused to do so, saying no one else could care for her cats, and that before her death flowers were brought to her from the grave of her favorite cat.

Mademoiselle Berger, in private life Mrs. Paul Paneritus, was born in Austria, where her parents were members of the household of Emperor Francis Joseph. She played before the emperor, Queen Victoria, Queen Alexandra and President Roosevelt.

Dog Adopts Chicks

Reversing the recent case in which a Rhode Island Red hen adopted a litter of puppies a four-year-old poodle, owned by Theodore Gauthier of West Springfield, Mass., is playing mother to a brood of 15 chicks, the Philadelphia Public Ledger says.

The chicks, incubator born, attracted the poodle's attention when brought home by Mr. Gauthier. Finally the poodle was allowed to adopt them after much whining and refusing to eat. The chicks are being brought up with an abnormal tendency to cleanliness, for Fifi licks them as she would a puppy.

Personally we dislike children who are too considerate of their elders,

ROCKEFELLER MEETS OIL DRIVERS ON ROAD

Magnate Gives Employee and Rival New Dimes.

New York.—Harold Riley, who was driving a big Standard Oil tank truck, stopped as he rounded a turn on the hilly road between Riverdale and Bloomingdale, N. J., and came to a stop as he saw a gasoline truck of the Tidal Oil company approaching. Charley Stout of Dundee Lakes was driving it.

"Leave any business for me?" said Charley, coming to a stop.

"I pretty well oiled up the whole country," said the Standard Oil man.

A costly closed car coming from Riverdale stopped between them. A door opened and an old man in a gray cap and gray duster stepped briskly out on the road.

Pleased by Recognition.

"We're lost boys," he said to the two drivers. Then, addressing himself to the driver of the red Standard

John D. Rockefeller.

Oil truck, he asked: "Can you tell me the way back to the Oakland-Suffern road?"

"Go back to Riverdale and take the right turn, Mr. Rockefeller," said Riley.

"You recognize me, eh?" said the oil man delightedly, extending his hand.

"I certainly do," said Riley. "Glad to meet any oil man," said Mr. Rockefeller, shaking hands also with Stout, who had jumped down from his seat on the rival truck.

"Always glad to meet a man in the oil business, but, of course (shaking the Standard Oil driver's hand again), the Standard Oil is my first love."

Dimes Begin to Appear.

"Just a minute, boys," he said to the drivers. "Now, Riley, that's for you."

He gave the Standard Oil driver one of his famous fresh minted dimes. Then he inquired about their families—found Stout had one child and Riley none, so he gave each of them a dime "for the wife" with his "compliments" and an extra dime for the baby.

Texas Cowboy, 95, Still Active, Rides the Range

Childress, Texas.—Supple as a youth in muscle, vigorous and hearty, H. R. Mangum, ninety-five years old, is still riding the range on the big ranch of the Smith brothers, near here.

He is said to be the oldest cowboy still in active service in the country. Mangum has been a cowhand ever since he came to Texas from South Carolina, three-quarters of a century ago. He was well along toward middle life when the famous Chisholm trail was established. He went up the trail with herds of cattle many times.

In his early life he worked on ranches in the southern part of Texas. As the wild lands of the more western parts of the state were opened up he went with the venturesome cattlemen into their new grazing territory. He was upon the frontier when Indian raids were common and when buffaloes populated the unbroken region by countless thousands.

Mangum says that he has observed no set of rules of living. He "went the usual paces" of a cowboy in the stirring days and has devoted himself to hard work and life in the open air.

Boy Finds Pail of Gold While Diving in California

Marysville, Cal.—"Rainbow's End" has been found—the old legend is true.

The pot of gold lay at the bottom of a 12-foot pool of water in Dry creek, near Robbins.

Twelve boys of Yuba county found it as their flashing bodies plunged deeply into the limpid water—and one of them bumped his head upon reality, in the shape of an old, rusty tin pail.

Half filled with nuggets and dust of gold, the value of the find has not yet been estimated. It may be worth thousands. The boys are not particularly interested in how many.

The old pail bears on its side the legend of a man's name, now undecipherable, and the date "1863."

Likes Chain Gang

Knoxville, Tenn.—After various acts of petty mutiny and efforts to escape from the county workhouse, one of the convicts, a burly Canadian, has become enamored with the place and refuses to leave, even though his sentence has expired.

The prisoner now seems to actually enjoy the hard manual work.
